University Poets in Anthology.
UNIVERSITY OF OREGON Eugene, Ore.—Five University of Oregon students, two of them of the class of 1925, had poems they had written published in this year's anthology, "Poets of the Future." This is the largest number of Oregon persons ever represented in the anthology. The five, four of them from Portland, were: Margaret Scawlan Eugene, and Leon K. Byrne, Walter Evans Kidd, Philip Sherman and Eleanor Burt. chieff, all of Portland.

"The reclamation service would fix a maximum acreage of ownership and then the owner of the land would be expected to make reservations for the land desired and then place upon the market the balance of the land at the appraised price."
The committee report was laid on the table until next week when the chamber will consider it further.

Lees Compliments Body
Mr. Lees, introduced by A. W. Nelson and by H. E. Watkins, chairman, delivered an address of great interest to members in which he praised the organization for its forward work in assisting in the procuring of highways, streets, homes and city projects of a high plane of usefulness and beauty.
He outlined the purposes of the national organization, declaring that, composed of 1400 chambers throughout the nation, it functions from the point where local chambers' usefulness ends. He cited several instances where the organization performed constructive work.
Reports from the membership committee and the Oregon Trail committee were given during the business session of the meeting, which was held in the Odd Fellows hall. The Rev. George Pellard opened the meeting by returning thanks.

Admiral Moffett Explains Position

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of naval armaments, testified before President Coolidge's aircraft commission in Washington, putting himself on record as opposed to Colonel William Mitchell's plan for a separate air service. He is shown reading his prepared statement.

MEXICO CITY LIKE AMERICA

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Mexico is about 100 per cent American from a standpoint of chewing gum, movies, litneys, baseball slang, tooth paste, ice cream soda, waffles and five-cent literature.
In each of these enumerations the United States product found on every Main street also flourishes in pristine vigor throughout the Mexican capital.
America's most ubiquitous brand of automobile hooks for custom through every street. Chewing gum has become a habit. The only difference between the Mexican and the home variety is that the wrappers are printed in Spanish.
A Mexican with restaurant experience in the States started a modest waffle and hot-oake shop here and put up a sign "American quick lunch" at the shelves and anything but snappy. Business establishments close a minimum of two hours for the noon meal. But the "quick lunch" idea went over big and now there are dozens of such places here. The name, however, continues to be a misnomer. It is quite possible to spend two hours over waffles.
Soda fountains are frequent and the output would do credit to any place north of the Rio Grande. The dentifrices popular in the United States loom large upon the shelves and in the display windows. The same applies to scores of widely used American products and articles.
Some of the popular-priced and widely-circulated periodicals, especially weeklies, are on sale here the same day as in the States, and have a large following.
As for the movies—if American studios ceased production every cinema theater in Mexico City would have to close. Some local and a few European films appear, but they are rare.
Baseball is popular and is increasing. The Mexican small boy knows his Babe Ruth dope perfectly and will predict with confidence some big league results. There are some good Mexican teams and they draw well.

MacTAVISH ARRAIGNED; GIVES BOND

of heavy debts.
Finally, and volubly, A. J. Stange was there.
Stange was the man who commented a few days ago to take over MacTavish's heavy debts—at least $15 worth of them—and who placed money in the bank, avowedly for that purpose.
In the presence of his benefactor and members of the school board, to most of whom MacTavish is said to have indebted himself, the young coach drew checks to the exact amount of the sum held in trust for him.
Then, "in order that he might walk the streets with his face uncovered," as one of the witnesses yesterday put it, MacTavish was intrusted with the delivery of the checks.
Claiming to have lost some of the checks, it is charged, he called at the bank during the noon hour and drew $100 in cash from the fund placed there in his name.
That night he left town in his car, leaving the following note of explanation on his dresser:
"These keys are to the home. Please give these keys (the bunch) to Mr. Towler, principal of the high school."
MacTavish was brought home Sunday by Sheriff Brethens from Sabin, where he was arrested when he walked into a telegraph office to claim a telegram.

Casualty into fence.
At that angle his lights were not immediately discernible to Getchell, who was driving in the opposite direction. As soon as he saw the car, Getchell says that he turned out to the right, crushing into the fence and tearing out the boards for seven or eight feet along the side of the car. His action did not prevent a collision, however, the left side of his vehicle striking the left fore part of the parked car.
Where Romig was when the Getchell car hit him has not been decided satisfactorily. There was blood in the back of the open car in which he had been driving; yet his body lay 15 or more feet beyond it in the road.
Six Bruce, a freight brakeman waiting with his train for passenger train No. 26 to pass, was one of the first persons on the scene of the accident. He held his lantern while Romig's body was examined to see if there might still be a chance to save his life.
The Holmenkamp ambulances were called and the body brought to La Grande last evening.
