MAN YAWNS, JAWS STICK

OREGON CITY, Ore. - A stick healthy yawn upon awakening in the morning is an expression of satisfaction over a fine night's sleep for most persons, but for Frank Hogland, "tourist" from Seattle, it meant a trip to the emergency hospital here. Frank yawned long and wide but when he attempted to close his mouth he found he was unable to do so. Both his jaws were out of place and it required the aid of a physician to straighten out the yawn. Hogland is a traveler who sleeps out in the "great open spaces." He had only seven cents but he proved that he was liberally offered the nurse this amount, which she refused.

According to the testimony of Sheriff Breshers and others, there were no marks on the pavement or in the gravel to indicate that the wheels of Getchell's car had been locked.

MISS DOLBROW ESSAY WINNER

Jennie Dolbrow, a junior, wrote the winning essay submitted by a high-school contestant in the contest held in connection with the "Save Old Ironsides" week, which came to close with programs in the several schools today, and won the right to compete with winners in the high schools all over the state. Now, should she prove the Oregon champion, she may enter her essay with those of state winners in the national contest.

Essays submitted by the children in the grades were so uniformly good that the judges, including Dr. Lile Green, chairman of the Elks committee in charge of the "Old Ironsides" restoration movement, H. L. Hess, F. S. Ivanhoe, Hugh E. Brady and Colon H. Fotherard, are taking additional time to decide the winners.

Beautiful reproductions of Chas. Robert Patterson's painting of "Old Ironsides" were presented to the La Grande schools, a copy for each building, when members of the committee and friends addressed the children at their programs today.

Mr. Fotherard spoke to Central pupils; the Rev. W. C. Ross, to Willow school; Mr. Green, to Greenwood; Mr. Hess to Riveria, and Justice Brady to the high school.

With the close of the essay contest the campaign to save the little frigate "that never knew defeat" is finished except for the sale of "Old Ironsides" buttons, which are to be purchased at 10 cents each by the children or interested grownups at Birnie's, the L. & L. drug store, Silverthorn-Wright's drug store and the Newlin book store.
