That— Princess lines for dresses are becoming most significant. A slightly draped princess bodice and a flaring skirt form a charming interpretation of this mode.

That— A society woman in New York is managing a mission pleure theater, in which all the work is done by women. Their husbands are back home making the beds.

That— Animation seems to be the designers' chief aim. Anything that will flutter, anything that will move even with slightest breeze, is accepted—scarfs, aprons, blia, jabots, ribbons—all the gay, lively touches possible.

That— The federal bills are now so overcrowded that all those about to commit crimes are warned that they will have to wait their turn.

That— Although the front and side flares are emphasized, the back flare, because it is in such direct rebellion to the flat back, is most interesting. It exhibits itself in box pleats, pockets and circular creases.

That— Acting Secretary Davis said that our system of defense isn't any good for making war on outsiders. It never has been. Perhaps that is the reason why we've won all the wars we've had so far.

That— It has been suggested that all the married men in town leave their wives at home and attend the chamber of commerce dance for the school teachers at the Elks' hall Friday night. Don't crowd, meat.

That— Besides the regular departments, there are 22 government bureaus and commissions in Washington, D. C. Should you desire a check cashed while on your honeymoon, you call on all of them—before walking home.

That— Demitenses and sophistication are achieved by the women of fashion when they design the street frock with those high collar and long sleeves, and then touch it with gay, leather.

That— The President of Mexico says America is on trial before the world. Maybe he wants to get on the list of next year's commencement speakers.

That— It is not proper for the furnace coal shovel to remark to the lunch pinner, "After you, Alphonse!"

That— The stings are now declared to be an absolute test to determine actual death. If you don't feel it, you will know that you are no longer alive. Try it.

Paris aptly demonstrates her creative supremacy through the new ideas which she has sent over for the woman of fashion this Fall. Come and see these new Dresses, Frocks and Coats—at interesting prices, too.

An alluring new basque style dress with full skirt is made of satin. The shirring at shoulder seam harmonizes with the shirring heading inserts at front and sides.

A stunning princess flare coat that is destined for high popularity uses Venice with dyed opossum collar and cuffs. The collar is in mushroom style. The coat has a decided flare and the color is wine.

Fur Trimming on Dress Coats

Our large assortment of dress coats are meeting with popular approval, due largely to the extensive use of fur trimmings. You will love the large, warm fur collars and cuffs to be found on most of our dress coats, new styles arriving every day or two.

Snug Little Hats for Street Wear

So much of a hats' chic depends upon lines suitable to each wearer. The curve of a brim, be it large or small, the tilt of a feather, that's what counts. You will find our milliner only too glad to make any changes you may decide upon.

New Fall Shoes

For dress and street wear in either slippers or oxfords, with high or low heels may be had in our shoe section.

BUCK TEAM IS IN POOR SHAPE

PENDLETON, Ore. (Special)—A Buckaroo is usually a rough and ready gent, ready for battle at a moment's notice, but when the Buckaroos of the Pendleton high school team and straggled onto the field next Saturday afternoon for their annual struggle with the Baker gridiron aggregation, they will probably be eleven of the most docile and thoroughly vanquished rough riders who have ever appeared in the Round-Up arena. As a result of the mauling they received last week from the husky McLoughlin high school squad at Milton, at least seven of them are totally unfit to mount even the sturdiest of a merry-go-round equine, let alone uphold the traditions of Pendleton high against the invading Copper jackets from over the mountains.

Captain Butler's injured roll reads like a casualty list from the Penderers battlefield during the world war. The backfield will be without Harold Hatton and Tom Shane, the former having an infected ankle which carries blood poison, while Shane is still nursing a jumper crop of boils. This leaves Johnson at fullback with an injured thigh muscle that threatens at any time to put him on the bench; Adkinson, half, with a bruised knee; Simonton, half, still limping from a sprained ankle received in the layton game and Suttner, quarter, with a weak wrist which interferes with his passing and handling the ball, while Halverson, another halfback, has a handicap in the form of a bad hip.

The forward wall is equally hard hit. Cumming, end, has a badly swollen and discolored eye as a result of a bad gash received at Milton which required several stitches to close. Sherrill, the other wing man, who probably received the worst mauling of any member of the team at the hands of the fast Milton backs, is favoring a charley horse, while Jones, Robinson and Young have bruised muscles in a more or less degree. To top this off Marion Albert, tackle, is out with an infected gland under his arm as the result of a skinned elbow, and George Sumnerville, husky guard, is ineligible. To sum it up, Minnis, tackle, and Lang, center, seem to be the only players to come through the Milton game unscathed.

To face this team of cripples and near cripples, Coach Glanderemann of Baker will bring a squad that has not had its good line crossed in four games this season. Hatbox, Halfway, Prairie City and Union having been whitewashed in turn by the Copper jackets, and they are out to maintain this record. Several of the 1924 team that held Coach Taylor's team to a 9 to 0 score last year are on this season's squad, and they, with their new mates, are coming Saturday with blood in their eyes to even up old scores, and to obliterate a string of defeats at the hands of Pendleton which dates back to 1915.

Billy Evans Says

ROLE OF UMPIRE.
The important part that umpiring plays in a world series has been conclusively proved in the 1925 event.

When an umpire goes into a world series his reputation is at stake. He calls them as he sees them and in so doing lays himself open to criticism by the world at large.

The decision very often decides a ball game. The margin of one ball game often determines the winner of a series.

During the regular playing season of 154 games it is possible for an umpire to have some unusual decisions stir up all kinds of trouble for a time but it is forgotten later on.

In a world series that consists of only seven games, any questionable decision by an umpire that decides the result, is written on the record books and stays there.

The umpire who makes such a decision will probably hear about it for the rest of his career.

Charley Richter, one of the best umpires that ever called a ball or strike, had such a decision in the third game of the 1925 clash.

RICE'S CATCH.
Sam Rice's sensational catch on Earl Smith's line drive that carried him into the right field bleachers will always be a home of contention.

Richter, a square shooter, who calls them as he sees them, was working at second. He rushed out on the hit and got as close to it as possible.

Old Stars Perform

You've doubtless heard of Jim Thorpe and Hinky Haines as stars on the football field. Well here they are showing members of the New York Giants professional eleven just how to place kick. Haines is holding the ball.

He still had the ball in his possession.

Under the circumstances, it was impossible for Richter to render any other decision than the one he did, ruling it a legal catch. He says he would have done so whether or not Rice came out with the ball.

COSTLY DECISION.

That decision, more than any other play that has happened in a world series in years, bears out my contention that the umpire is constantly risking his reputation in the big games.

What is more, the umpires are taking such chances for a sum of money that in no way compares to the compensation slipped the players.

Charley Richter, a great umpire, called a tough play as he saw it against the league he is seated on the field. Another tribute to the honesty of the umpires whose integrity has never been questioned.

FINED FOR "TOTTING" GUN ON SUNDAY

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP)—Just as Gus Hill of Strasburg was about to appeal a conviction in justice court for having a pistol in his possession the commonwealth's attorney dug up an ancient law of Virginia which prohibited the possession of a pistol on the Sabbath no matter what the pretext. The statute had never been repealed. Hill's offense had been committed on the Sabbath, and the justice accordingly assessed a heavy fine.

UNION READY FOR WALLOWA

UNION, Ore. (Special)—Posters are out announcing a football double header for Saturday afternoon when the Wallowa high school grid boys come to Union for their annual game. Both the first and second teams will play. A rally and bonfire will be staged Friday evening as in the usual custom before the first game at home each year.

With the Smith-Hughes boys here for their visit to the state experiment station on Saturday morning about one hundred of them, and the two games in the afternoon, Union will be host to a goodly number of young people for that day. The high school will serve a cafeteria lunch at the noon hour.

RUSSIAN INFLUENZA IS ON THE DECLINE

RIGA (AP)—The proportion of illiterates in Russia had been reduced from 77 per thousand in 1914 to 500 per thousand at the present time. Among the vast amount of reading matter freely circulated in Soviet Russia today, in contrast to pre-war Russia, scientific works are most in demand. Books on political economy and sociology are given preference. Other very popular sciences are chemistry, astronomy and biology.

President Roosevelt said, "Good crops are of little value to the farmer unless they open the door to a good life on the farm."
