very credulous. They are too much affected by the last things they have read. Strauss wasn't the first man to present the mythical version of the New Testament; nor was he the last. But let some modern writer recast his thought in present day forms and the young people read it and believe it. They do not know they are confronting old questions that have been thrashed out time and again. They are not experienced enough to answer the questions aroused in their minds.

"Foodick only repeated the old story. Bryan repeated the old story. The Modernist-Fundamentalist controversy really involved only a few extremists. Most people knew that the truth lies between the two contentions.

"The flag of destruction has to be waved in every generation. What we need to do is remember history and to recall that the flag of destruction has been waved many times in the past."

YOUNGSTERS UPHELD BY CARL DONEY

streets, I do believe.
"The youth of today is more religious than that of other days. I believe we have just 25 students out of the 510 at Willamette this term who are not members of any church."
"There are many things in the church that they do not like, and they are more frank than the older people in expressing their dissatisfaction."
"Every few days some of them come to me with complaints about things as they exist, wondering if they should adjust them in this manner or that."
"I remember when I was a student" and the president's keen eyes twinkled—"running the college paper. I thought that the administration was wrong. And I spent a restless floor-walking night deciding whether I should do away with the institution. I thought I could do it with the college paper." He chuckled softly, and then went on:
"Finally I took a reasonable view of the affair and wrote a very conservative editorial."
"Has to Start at Beginning"
"The young people today are just like that. We forget that every generation has to start at the beginning. Sometimes we do not learn very much from the experiences of the past."
"Young people, you know, are substituted for Miss Henkle, of the primary department at Mouthouth, when the primary teachers assembled in classroom three for discussions of their work.

H. E. Inlow, superintendent of the schools at Pendleton, addressed the teachers of intermediate and advanced grades at their session in the basement study hall. "A Testing Program for the Classroom" was his subject.
"Protonotes to History" and how they add the "personal touch" to otherwise "dry as dust" reading made up the thoughts brought to the high school department by Mr. Powers in his second talk this morning. The high school pedagogues convened in room 15. After a brief recess, the departments assembled again for talks by Thomas Gentle of Mouthouth and E. E. Elliott, director of vocational education, who resides at Salem.
C. A. Howard, Marshfield superintendent, gave the afternoon address preceding the departmental meetings.
Thomas Gentle's observation class in fifth grade reading was the concluding number on the program, which dismissed at 4 o'clock.
Tonight the teachers will adjourn to the Latter Day Saints tabernacle, where they will be joined by La Grande citizens and visitors for the address of Dr. Carl G. Doney, president of Willamette university.
Dr. Doney is a national figure in education circles. He has been president of Willamette for 19 years and during his administration has built an institution that ranks high among the denominational schools of the country.
H. J. Hammer, operative baritone, will furnish music for the evening program. He announces his number as the "Prelude" from "Pagliacci."
Dr. Doney is scheduled to give a second discourse at the opening meeting Friday, using as his subject, "The Good Teacher."
Churchill on Program
J. A. Churchill, state superintendent of public instruction, will conclude this session with an address at 11 o'clock, following three departmental meetings.
Organization of a county unit of Oregon State Teachers' association is one of the big features of the Friday afternoon session. C. A. Howard will explain "Objectives of the O. S. T. A."
A presentation of the new health education program by Miss Marie Connolly, director of health education at Portland, and a selected address by Thomas Gentle, whose original speeches are one of the attractions of the program, will close the institute proper.
Tomorrow evening, the pedagogues will put away their notebooks and put on their prettiest frocks to prove to their hosts and themselves that even teachers have recesses.
