'COLD' GAS IS GAINING FAVOR
SNYDER, Tex. (AP).—A vast reservoir of "cold," non-inflammable gas has been discovered in the oil fields of this section and is being used to operate machinery and pumps.
The gas is said to insure the most economical operation in the history of oil production. Small wells, which otherwise would require more oil for their boilers than they could produce are now operating at a profit.
For a time the gas mystified oil men and chemists, but it finally has been analyzed as an air containing about 92 per cent nitrogen.
One of the strange sights here is to see boilers producing pressure without fire. The gas is run into the boilers and in two minutes a pressure of 125 pounds is attained. From the boiler the "air" is carried under pressure through the usual steam lines to pumps and machinery.
The air has been used to drill three different wells within a radius of three miles. Additional producers have all struck this gas in sufficient quantities to finish their wells.
Men in the field use the air for anything steam would accomplish. All they need to do is to turn the air into the boiler, which merely acts as a reservoir to equalize pressure. It also is used to inflate automobile tires and for refrigeration.
Watermelons, milk, water, or anything the men wish to cool is placed under the exhaust of an engine, which is covered with ice instead of being hot with steam. A watermelon left under the exhaust for two hours will freeze solid.
The air itself is not actually cold, but the release of pressure produces the effect of cold, similar to the process of manufacturing ice with ammonia under pressure.
The gas makes between three and five million cubic feet a day, from the first well, with a rock pressure of more than 200 pounds.

Photographers Pester Coolidge—He Shows It
Photographers pestered President Coolidge, then presidential private secretary, for permission to "snap" the Coolidges on their yacht, Mayflower.
Stump replied that the president said "No"—the only privacy he got was on the Mayflower and he wasn't going to have it intruded on.
One day one of the photographers chanced to be at the navy yard just as the yacht was preparing to leave with the Coolidges as passengers, for a cruise down Chesapeake bay. He looked longingly at the vessel from afar. Suddenly from her deck some one yelled to him. He approached. It was the president.
"Do you know," quoth the latter affably, "out of all the hundreds of pictures you boys have taken of Mrs. Coolidge and me, never one has shown us on the Mayflower. We'd rather like one. Why not shoot a few and give us some of the prints?" Then do whatever you like with the negatives.
What a golden opportunity! The cameraman took full advantage of it.
"I'll have to come clean," Stump confessed to the rest of the fraternity later. "The president is so fed up on being photographed that I felt sure he'd answer just as I quoted him—and I might get a scolding into the bargain—that I never asked him."

Italian Press Censor Asked to Condemn Early
ROME (AP).—Italian newspapers allied politically with the parties opposing the present Fascist government, whose daily denunciations are at the mercy of the press censor, have addressed a plea to the censor that "he condemn them quickly if he intends to condemn them."
The press law provides that the censor approve each issue of each newspaper, the penalty being suspension of the edition if anything is found objectionable.
Recently the censor changed his office hours so that he did not examine the newspapers until several hours after their appearance. The result was that condemnations came so tardily that the newspaper was unable to print a later expurgated edition, as was previously the custom. Consequently all the copies of the newspaper were seized and the regular readers had no copies at all.
"Please, Mr. Censor," the newspapers said, "would you mind condemning us quickly if you intend to at all?"

FARMER'S HOME LOOTED
KLAMATH FALLS, Ore.—Burglars raided the farm home of Rex Ford, prominent Klamath sheepman, near Olive, and stripped the house of furniture, clothing and everything they were able to move.
Peace authorities believe the burglars were part of an organized band which has been operating in this section, as this is the third wholesale burglary in a farm home here this fall. It is thought a truck was used to carry away the loot. The Ford family was away from the farm at the time.

Fast Thinking Saved Their Lives

Who is the biggest fool, you or I?
It is getting late in the fall and we bought 1000 gallons of Acme quality paint at 50c on the Dollar. The low price of $1.95 per gallon is moving it out at a tremendous speed. It will soon all be gone. The 20 gallon of white paint came yesterday and before we could get it into our warehouse, we had sold 15 gallon right off the truck. The price is $2.15 per gallon.
Call us up and we will set some aside for you.
The paint has come, you'll have to run if you want some.
You can have a ton or just take one's—his of fun after all is done.
