

JAPAN FAVORS GOODWILL PLAN

BOSTON (AP).—A program for international good will devised by a Boston woman in New York has been so favorably received in Japan that reports indicate concrete action on her plan is in prospect.

A little more than a year ago, when the exclusion act was still ranking in many Japanese, Miss Jessie M. Sherwood, former secretary of the Japan society of Boston, who for years has held a weekly solace for Japanese students in Boston colleges, was asked to write an article for the Japanese-American, a newspaper published in New York.

She chose to advance and develop the idea of a religious conference, based on the common objects of Christians, Buddhists and Jews to attain a warless world. She dwelt on the part which religious difference has played in racial prejudice and saw in such a conference an opportunity to dispel misinformation on the religions of other lands and bring a greater public support to world peace.

The article, or the idea it embodied, was copied widely and found prominent place in the newspapers of Japan. Among the correspondents that Miss Sherwood acquired was Gendo Nakai of Osaka, a Buddhist priest. He wrote her first that the Buddhists at the Tokyo peace exposition had already espoused a similar idea, that a group of priests had visited America to call to the attention of President Coolidge the community of ideals but that he feared that unless the United States took the lead, as with the disarmament conference, nothing would be done.

Recently, however, he wrote again, saying that the first step toward such a conference had been taken in Tokyo by two quasi-religious organizations. An extract from his letter follows:

"Concerning the religious conference you so ardently propose, I am glad to let you know that recently two resolutions for holding a world religious conference passed in two meetings in Tokyo, almost independent of each other. The one in the mass meeting of the Religious Talking society, composed of well known professors, missionaries and priests. The other is in the meeting of professors and students of religious courses of Nippon university (a private institution).

"It is reported that both parties concerned will confer with each other to promote their common plan in co-operation. I hope your proposal will be realized in the not far future."

SAN PEDRO, Cal. (AP).—The 126-foot racing schooner Katoona II, three-time winner of the King's cup at Cowes, England, made her way into the harbor here, battered by heavy seas and gales, her sails ripped to shreds. ## Fall Sowing for Annual Flowers

Any garden work you can do this fall you won't have to do next spring. So it is a good idea to get some of the annuals planted which will do just as well if not better planted this fall than held over until next spring. Cutting gardens, an English practice of long standing, in which annuals are planted in rows like vegetables to be grown for cutting and without regard to their decorative effect, are needed with every planting. Stripping flowers from ornamental borders leaves bare spots and ruins the effect, yet this is necessary to get flowers for the house unless there is a cutting patch. For the cutting garden, the bachelor's buttons (centaureas) or cornflowers and annual larkspurs can be sown any time this month or next. The young plants are hardy and will keep right on going next spring. The cornflower is good only for cutting as it is not an ornamental subject in a bed or border. Its foliage, never particularly attractive, becoming shabby as the season advances. The blooms, however, are beautiful for bouquets. California poppies, snapdragons, calendulas, and scores of other annuals are just as well sown in the fall as in the spring. Many of these plants will not germinate until the temperature suits them, regardless of whether they are sown spring or fall. Portulaca or rose mallow and salpiglossis are plants of this kind. Annual poppies should be sown this fall. They are hardy as rocks and peculiarly valuable as a dressing for tulip beds. Seed scattered this fall will come up in early spring and by the time the tulips have faded the poppies will conceal the dying leaves and give another fine flash of bloom in the same space. The Shirley type is best for this purpose. Give the individual poppy plants plenty of room. One plant given a square foot to itself will produce double the number of blooms that two or three in the same space will give.

ASTORIA PARES BUDGET

ASTORIA, Ore.—Following a taxpayers' meeting last week when the city commission was requested to slash the sum of $15,000 from the city budget as prepared by the commission and budget board, the city commissioners announced today that they had pared the budget for 1926 by $15,499. The fire, police, health and engineer's departments were concerned in the slash and items for a city band, playgrounds and tourist campground were eliminated.

Sir Robert Peel was the first man to organize a trained and uniformed police force in Britain, hence the name "peeler" and "holby" which are applied to policemen.
