Bridge Party Guests Emulate Cartoon Folk

Widow Zander, Frackles and other characters from favorite comic strips were among the guests when Mrs. L. F. Dunn entertained at a costume bridge party last evening at her home on Spring avenue. Three tables were surrounded at cards, the prizes going to the following players: Mrs. Tom Panner, first; Mrs. C. H. Soix, second; and Miss Bertha Wainwright, consolation. Supper was served in two courses by the hostess, with the assistance of Mrs. De Lefe Greene and Mrs. C. H. Claycomb. Bouquets of orchid corsages decorated the tables.

Quiet Wedding at Baptist Parsonage

The Garden

Protecting Climbing Roses

The sad experience of gardeners all over the northern and central west with climbing roses for the past two years show that it is useless to take any chances with them. They must be protected to be certain they will not kill back to the ground. This is the month to begin jacking them down from their supports, to lay them along the ground and cover them with a mulch of leaves or straw, anchored in place. Pull the earth up for about six inches around the main stem and lay down boxes or boards over which to bend the vines so that they will not be snapped in the taking down process. Handled in this way, a full crop of climbing roses is altogether feasible. Left upon their poles, arches or other supports, it is a gamble with the chances all against the roses. Our finest climbing roses, both the ramblers and the larger flowering types are hybrids of a wild trailing rose of Japan, the Wichuriana rose. This is not reliably hardy and it has been crossed with tea roses, which gives another infusion of tender blood, so it is necessary to protect to be sure of the roses. The old Prairie Queen is the one reliably hardy standby in the central states, with Crimson Rambler ranking it a close second. The latter has lost much of its popularity because of finer, newer introductions, but its ability to stand up over winter is winning its old friends back again. To not cover the roses until the first freeze has crusted the ground. The chances need to ripen to the limit and the covering is to save them from alternate thawing and freezing once cold weather sets in for the season. Late November is usually as early as the laying down process should be undertaken.

Sister Mary Says:

(By Sister Mary)
Breakfast—Baked grapes, cereal, thin cream, poached eggs on Graham toast, crisp Graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Baked potatoes, creamed dried beef, celery, bean bread, strawberry preserves, milk, tea.

Dinner—Leftover tomato in rice border, scalloped potatoes, radishes, jelly roll cake, rye bread, milk, coffee.

The woman who goes to market regularly often finds herself able to add such vegetables as radishes and other more or less out-of-season luxuries to her menus at a moderate cost. While we aren't pulling radishes from our own gardens these days, the big gardeners are harvesting a good crop and when a large shipment comes into the local market it's quite possible to treat one's family. The ordinary salad can be eliminated.

Jelly Roll Cake

Two eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1-3 cup boiling water, 1 cup flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla.

Beat yolks of eggs until thick and lemon-colored, using a Dover beater. Slowly add 1/2 cup sugar, beating constantly. Add boiling water and beat well. Beat in remaining sugar and vanilla. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder and stir into first mixture. Fold in whites of eggs beaten on a platter until stiff and dry. Pour into a dripping pan and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. The dripping pan should be carefully oiled and floured before pouring in the cake batter. Remove from oven and turn at once onto a dampened towel spread on molding board. Trim off edges of cake and spread with jelly, using from 1/2 to 1 cup. Roll as firmly as possible, beginning at the narrow end. Wrap in dry towel tightly around the roll to keep it in place and let cool. Cut across the roll in 1/2-inch slices to serve. This is a simple, easy dessert to make after one learns to work quickly. If the cake is not rolled while warm it will break and not be particularly attractive. (Copyright, 1925, NEA Service.)

DRAIN OVER-IRRIGATED LAND BY DEEP WELLS

BERKELEY, Cal. (AP)—Drainage of over-irrigated lands by pumping from deep wells is the latest method put into use by farmers of the Pacific coast states in their fight against alkali or water-logged soil.

Drainage by deep ditches or by tilling had proved to cost $40 to $60 an acre and had usually necessitated formation of drainage districts and issuance of bonds to cured by lands which were already part of bond-carrying irrigation districts. The deep well pumping system was originated six years ago, but it has been adopted in the irrigated regions of central California until now more than 400 wells are draining nearly 100,000 acres. The wells are 125 to 200 feet deep and the water is pumped by electric-driven rotary turbines. Each pump will maintain the underground water at any desired sub-surface level, over approximately 100 acres. The principal point in favor of the well-and-pump drainage is that it delivers to the surface water available for irrigation worth more than the current needed to run the electric pumps.
