clerk's office that $185 provided him for extra office help was unused last year, that amount was slashed from appropriations to that office.

Allowances for fees and traveling expenses for the county court and commissioners was increased $225. The district attorney's office was granted $125 for office rent and stenographer's salary.

Last year the water master's office requirements exceeded the amount allowed, so an additional $125 was added in that direction. Small repairs and supplies called for $50 more on the county fund.

The county nurse was given an increase of $100 for expenses in connection with her work among the schools.

Five hundred dollars was added to the appropriation for the work of the county agent.

Must Pay for Elections— Two elections, primary and general, falling within the coming year, an appropriation of $2500 had to be set aside for election expenses.

A hundred dollars was allowed to make up deficiencies in the fund for coroner's inquests.

Justice of the peace court was granted an additional $100, since last year's apportionment was insufficient.

For the destruction of predatory animals in the county, a fund of $500 was set aside. This money will be matched by the state, and the total doubled by the action of the federal government, which will also provide the county with a paid hunter. Neighboring counties have already taken advantage of the government's offer.

While the increases appear to enlarge the budget, they are in reality taken care of by small reductions of various items in the different departments, so that the total increase, exclusive of the high school tuition fund, is only $977.52.

The men are far ahead of the women in percentage of self-support, the figures show. Five hundred and fifty-four men and 193 women are totally self-supporting.

Taking the student body as a whole, there are 747 who are totally independent; 203 more than 75 per cent self supporting; 404 who are more than 50 per cent; and 264 who are less than 50 per cent. Four hundred and one students failed to report.

peace," the speaker said in opening his sermon.

"We abhor war, not so much because Jesus declared himself against it, for he didn't in so many words, as because we have learned that war is brutal and brutalizing; it is unimaginably destructive; it is utterly futile, and an needless as it is suicidal.

"Harry Postleick tells us that war is the most colossal and ruinous social sin that affects mankind. It is utterly and brazenly un-Christian. It means everything that Jesus did not mean, and means nothing that Jesus meant.

"The Lusitania," Mr. Pollard continued, "sank with 1600 lives aboard. If we would have to sink a Lusitania every day for 70 years before we would equal the destruction of life alone in the great war.

"The greatest loss" of the cost in money equals an expenditure of $20,000 for every hour that has passed since the birth of Christ.

"But the greatest loss in the world war was not in lives or material, but in peace and spiritual possessions. The churches closed and supported an un-Christian institution, until the people have lost confidence in the church and un-Christian nations look on Christianity as a bloodstained religion.

"We accomplished what we set out to do—we crushed Germany, but we did it so thoroughly that we upset the economic status of the world. Instead of destroying militarism, we find that France today maintains a peace army greater than the army Germany supported in the days of her militaristic glory. We have increased a few things, but we have established even more dictatorships. There is less liberty in America today than there ever was before the war.

"As individuals we know better than to go to war. It is our corporate senselessness that leads us into war.

"Five things got us into wars: Economic imperialism, militarism, alliances, secret diplomacy and fear. If we would establish a lasting peace, we must plan to overcome that quintet of causes, and establish institutions in the process of justice.

"The idea of arbitration has grown rapidly since the middle of the nineteenth century. The latest step is the establishment of a permanent court of international peace. It is an American idea, proposed, informed and propagated by Americans. Thirty peace parties now represented in the United States are uniting to urge America to join the world court.

"All of America wants the world court. Let us see that our senators

Soldier's Body Found; La Granders Aid Search

Mrs. George Wakefield, who lived in La Grande some months ago but has returned to her old home in Alabama, has just received word from the government that the body of her brother, numbered since the war among the unknown dead, has been found in an isolated place, and that it will be given proper burial and attention inured for the grave.

In a letter to Mrs. Lena Palmer, Red Cross chairman for Union county, Mrs. Wakefield expresses her gratitude to Otis Palmer, commander of the local post, who put government authorities in search of the missing man. The body still bore the identification disc, Mrs. Wakefield was informed by the government, so the young man's name will have been recorded with those of the known dead.

Mrs. Wakefield was her brother's foster mother, their own mother having died while he was very young.

FUNERAL POSTPONED

A special delivery letter from the decedent's mother in Rochester, N. Y., altered plans for the funeral of Ira M. Swan, a brakeman on the O-W. R. & N., this morning just half an hour before the body was to have been taken to the church for services.

Members of the I. O. O. F. had been endeavoring faithfully to locate their fellow member's family. As soon as the letter arrived, they dispatched a letter to Mrs. Swan telling her of her son's death. The body is at the Snodgrass & Zimmerman funeral parlors awaiting her directions as to the funeral.
