DARTMOUTH IS LEADING EAST

NEW YORK (AP)—The Dartmouth football juggernaut has claimed a thirteenth unbeaten Cornell team as its seventh consecutive victim and was pointing for the mythical eastern championship with an impressive scoring total of 297 points—an average of almost 44 points a game. The score was 72 to 13.

Far from the Green's devastating fifth, a great Yale team remained a formidable, though slight, challenger for the title. Dartmouth, now the only major team of the Atlantic seaboard unbeaten and undefeated, begins preparations Monday for an invasion of the mid-west to face Chicago. Dartmouth smothered the Ithacaans under a hail of forward passes and the fate of the public tongue was shared by a Harvard team which went down to its worst defeat since 1882 at the hands of Princeton. The Crimson defense was likewise bewildered by a storm of aerials. A Harvard defeat had been expected, but this was a rout which once more brought home to 59,000 spectators in Palmer stadium the fact that "big three" strength cannot be measured until the season ends. The failure of the Tiger to stop Colgate earlier in the season gave little indication of the real power of Roper's offensive and instead of easy victory, the strong Yale eleven now looks upon its battle with this jungle threat Saturday as a severe test.

Six Eleventh Fall.

Five elevens fell with the ridged Cornell team from the list of unbeaten eastern aggregations. Holy Cross, toppled unexpectedly by a Fordham team which earned a place through its 17 to 0 triumph as one of the best outfits of the year, headed the list. The others were Washington and Jefferson, beaten by a blocked kick after outplaying Pittsburg in the first three periods; Springfield, which lost to Amherst; Dickinson, upset by Gettysburg and Boston college, succeeded by West Virginia.

Syracuse, led by Ohio Wesleyan at 3 to 2, was the last undefeated team in the east to be scored upon. Colgate shares with Syracuse a record of no defeats and one tie, and these two elevens meet in one of next Saturday's major struggles.

Columbia, rated earlier in the year as one of the east's best teams, was held to a 4 to 6 tie by New York university.

Yale, unleashing a powerful second half offensive against Maryland with its regular team, after trailing 14 to 10 when the rest period arrived, came through as easily as had been forecast. So did Pennsylvania against Haverford, Navy against West Maryland, Georgetown against Lehigh, and Lafayette against Rutgers. Army was extended over by Duke, Johns than the Cadets had harrassed for, but Penn State, a good defensive team, created no stir by holding Notre Dame to one of the few scoreless ties of the year.

Coach Hill Roper of Princeton, whose Tigers routed Harvard Saturday, is opposed to scouting. "I don't know of any way to keep a man from looking on and telling what he sees, but I'd like to see scouting sent to the ash heap just the same," he said.

Fordham has replaced Columbia as New York's biggest 1925 contribution to eastern football. Undeafated this season the Maroon eleven by a victory over Holy Cross has gained recognition as a powerful scoring machine and one that might have bowled over many of the so-called major teams.

Cecil Walker, Australian rider, in the latest to sign a contract to pedal in the first six-day race of the new Madison Square garden. He won 18 races during the summer like season.

Tex Hekard, deciding to make war on high priced fighters, admits he lost $25,000 on the Walker-Shand and Slattery-Berentzough bouts last summer. "I am through taking all the risks and giving the fighters most of the money," he declares.

In spite of the fact that Princeton's successful aerial attack against Harvard startled Yale coaches, word has come out of New Haven that the Eli forces may start their second team against the Tigers. The Hocking idea of permitting the substitutes to break down the rival defense for a fresh first team has appealed to Coach Jones.

Billy Evans Says:

BABE REFORMS.
Now that Babe Ruth has decided no longer to be "Babe" Ruth to the fans, bookmakers and confidence men, it might be well to get a couple of other incidents out of our system relative to the wild days of the Hambleton.

Well, do I recall a certain afternoon in New York when the Babe's plea of sickness didn't get over with Manager Huggins. It happened one of the big running races was carded at Belmont that day.

Before the game Babe had laid a heavy wager on one of the entries in the first race. Just as the game started, some one confided to him that his selection was an also ran. The bet was for something like $1000.

Failure in the first race merely increased Ruth's desire to get to the race track. He hit safely his first time up, tried to steal second, was called out by Empire Hidebrand, whereupon he threw a handful of dust into the umpire's eyes.

The umpire chased him. Babe rushed to the clubhouse, made a quick change and was at the race track before the feature event was run.

As he came on the field the next day I asked him if he had had a pleasant time at the track.

"You fussy umpires just caused me an extra $3500 loss by chasing me. I can't see why Hidebrand should be so particular about that faded out suit of blue he is wearing."

CROSSED 'EM UP
Babe has always been a tough fellow to discipline because he seemed to have the faculty of doing his biggest things just about the time owners and managers were ready to lay on a heavy fine.

OREGON GIVES GRID RECORD

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Ore. (Special)—This year's Homecoming, scheduled for November 13, 14 and 15, is the eleventh annual "Old-Grad" fete in the history of the university. The celebrations were started in 1914 and have been continuous, except for 1918, the war year.

From the first, football games, every other year with Oregon Agricultural college, have been the feature of the week-end.

Records show that Oregon has been defeated but once in these Homecoming games. Two have been tied, while seven have been won.

GRID BREAKS.
The breaks of the game mean more in modern football than in the old days of the line crushing game.

In football, the blocking of a kick, the intercepting of a forward pass, the recovery of a fumble are classed as breaks of the game.

When a team wins through the medium of any of the above so-called breaks, it is usually regarded as having been very lucky. I am inclined to disagree with that viewpoint.

The blocking of a kick calls for agility in the line. The intercepting of a pass or the recovery of a fumble means that the fortunate player has followed the ball. Instead of being lucky, the team doing the above mentioned things, make the breaks.

Dartmouth beat Brown by two touchdowns. Sage of Dartmouth by blocking two vital kicks put his team in line for both scores. An intercepted forward pass by Saxton of Harvard made it possible for the crimson to defeat William and Mary.

MASY UPSETS.

Football east, west, south and north had its ups and downs Saturday, Oct. 31. It's the unusual when the week-end games fail to produce something out of the ordinary.

However, it is doubtful if any of the eastern or western reversals of form compared to that of the south when Tennessee defeated Georgia.

Vanderbilt beat Tennessee 34-7, an easy victory. Georgia came along and soundly trounced Vanderbilt, 25-7. Comparative scores, which after all mean nothing in football, made Georgia 46 points better than Tennessee.

When the two met, Tennessee provided the south its biggest upset of the year by winning from Georgia 12-7.

FAST PERFORMANCES apparently have no meaning in trying to dope the winners. Poor weather conditions and soggy playing fields have raised havoc with the general play.

Every Saturday the breaks decide a majority of the important games, but the breaks are not always mere luck; rather they are the result of good football.

Pipe This Cheer Leader

No wonder Tulane University of New Orleans has been the big surprise of the year in football. The most recent achievement of the southerners was an 18-7 defeat of Northwestern over and you have the reason. Who would's play football when urged on by Miss Draper?

BIG TEN RACE BADLY MESSED

CHICAGO (AP)—The scramble for the western conference football championship is tangled in the most extraordinary situation that has out-contorted the competing elevens since the "Big Ten" was organized.

Fate and nature combined to mess up the race. Fate sent Minnesota to the top of the heap ahead of Michigan against which no touchdown has been scored this season.

Iowa, along with Michigan, faded out of the championship picture as a result of losing to Wisconsin, 2 to 0, while the Wolverines lost to Northwestern, 3 to 2, in one of the most startling upsets in years. Previous to Saturday's games, played under the worst weather conditions imaginable, Michigan and Iowa generally were regarded as the strongest teams of the "Big Ten." All other teams, even Minnesota and Chicago, had been defeated.

As the situation now stands every team in the conference except Minnesota has lost. The Gophers, with only two more conference games to play, meeting Iowa next Saturday and the Wolverines a week hence will have a fair claim to the 1925 title if they win both games. The tie to that their record was 5-12 to 12 against Wisconsin a week ago. The wretched weather conditions including mud, rain, sleet and a blizzard, made it impossible for any of the contending teams to do anything but punt and wait for the break in the snow.

Michigan Defeat Big Upset.

The amazement of the Northwestern eleven in beating the powerful Michigan team was the outstanding upset of the day and raised the hopes of the purple of going into a tie for the title.

The same situation prevailed at Chicago where it was so slippery that "Red" Grange, who scored three touchdowns against Pennsylvania, actually lost more ground than he gained. Grange was stopped, not because of the impossible condition. On the times that Grange was free of tacklers and Pendleton in Lead.

In total number of victories, the Buckaroos have a decided edge over the Tigers.

Back in 1914 La Grande broke a losing streak that had lasted nearly a decade by giving Pendleton a severe beating. From then until 1922 honors were even but a win by the Bucks in 1922 and 1923 left La Grande on the short end of the string.

Last year's scoreless tie, a battle worth going miles to see, still leaves Pendleton with a margin of two victories since 1914.

Little has been heard from the Umatilla county seat as to its team's chances here but the Tigers are determined to win if possible.

started to get away on one of his famous runs his feet went out from under him in the mucky going. His team mates took advantage of Chicago errors to win, 13 to 6, however.

Town's hopes of a clear claim to the "Big Ten" championship were swept away in the teeth of a blizzard that made punting dangerous.

A poor punt at a critical time placed Wisconsin within scoring distance and enabled Bob Kross, brother of the Pennsylvania star, to crash over from the one-yard line for the only touchdown.

Ohio seemed to have more luck in the mud than Indiana and scored a touchdown that gave it a 7 to 0 victory as a result of a for-
