

NEW BUILDING UP AT PERRY

PERRY (Special)—The new store and office building being erected here for the Grande Ronde Lumber company are nearing completion. The new building will be a great improvement for Perry. The company is also getting ready to install electric lights in the community hall.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson spent the week end visiting her sister, Mrs. Mary Haskel.

Carl Kull drove over to Pendleton Sunday afternoon to meet his father, who came in on the afternoon train from Colfax, Wash. Mr. Kull expects to spend the winter at Perry.

Mrs. Opal Heikel spent the week end in La Grande visiting relatives.

Mrs. K. W. Smith and Mrs. William Watson made a trip to Pendleton recently to visit their sons a short time. The boys have joined the U. S. Army instead of the navy, as at first reported.

John Starr, night watchman at the Perry mill, is ill at present. Carl Kull is taking his place until he is better.

Mrs. Mary H. Kull, who was ill Saturday and Sunday, was able to resume her duties as school teacher here Monday morning.

Miss Leon Haver and Neph (Cousin) spent the week end visiting friends and relatives at Cove.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Foster and son Billy, of Hilgard, are visiting here for some time at the home of Ed Pitt. Mr. Foster is employed at the Grande Ronde Lumber company's mill.

Mrs. Lawrence Robertson called upon Mrs. C. C. Johnson Monday. Horace Nelson was a business caller at the home of Hart Kull Thursday.

Miss Blanche Martin gave a party for her school friends Sunday evening. The youngsters reported a good time.

Mrs. Frank Larson and son spent Friday visiting Mrs. Harvey Larson who has been ill.

Mrs. Frank Braden was a business visitor in Perry last week.

HEALTH

TYPHOID FEVER

(By Dr. Frederick Stricker)

What is the cause of typhoid fever?

It is caused by a tiny germ, the bacillus typhosus, which gets into the body by the fecal stream. It enters the way of the mouth and is introduced with the discharge of the body.

How do persons contract typhoid fever?

Primarily by swallowing germs that have come from some case of typhoid fever.

What are the main agencies by which the bacillus is spread?

By contaminated food, water, and milk; by flies and carriers.

How long does it take typhoid fever to develop?

It varies from seven to fourteen days.

What are the first symptoms?

Headache, constipation, bronchitis, relatively slow pulse, deafness, eruption and continued fever.

What is a typhoid carrier?

A well person harboring the germ of typhoid fever. He is a menace to the community, especially if he comes in contact with food or milk supplies.

How can we detect carriers?

By laboratory examination of feces and urine.

What should be done with the carrier?

He should be isolated until he is no longer a danger.

Is typhoid fever preventable?

Entirely so. Proper sanitary measures will protect the community and immunization will protect the individual.

What is the most important preventive measure?

Disinfection of the discharges of the infected person, thus stopping the infection at its source.

Is there any method of protection against typhoid fever as for smallpox and diphtheria?

Yes, anti-typhoid immunization.

How often should one be immunized?

Every three years.

What are the restrictions placed on typhoid fever cases in Oregon?

They must be reported to the health department. Patient must be isolated until the discharges are free from typhoid germs. Food products cannot be sold by a typhoid convalescent or by a healthy carrier.

PORTLAND CITIZEN PASSES

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Rustin Caughey, 74, newspaper editor and one of the first black artists on the Pacific coast, died here Tuesday. Mr. Caughey was born at Seville, Ohio, February 22, 1851. When 12 years old he ran away from home and enlisted in the Federal army as a drummer boy.

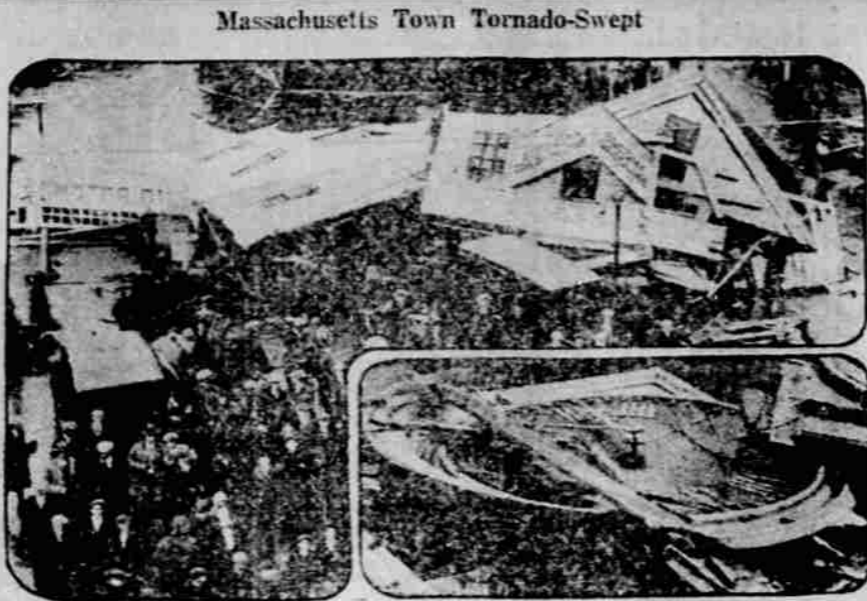

He came to the Pacific coast in August, 1878, was employed first as San Francisco newspaper editor, after which for about nine years he was a staff artist for the San Jose Mercury. Mr. Caughey came to Portland about 25 years ago and became a sketch artist for the Portland Telegram.

He is survived by his widow and a son, Arlington Rustin Caughey, an architect in New York city, and two daughters.

The Origin and Operation of Skaggs Stores

From the beginning of this explanation of the essentially co-operative plan of operation that has made the phenomenal growth of Skaggs stores possible it must be clearly understood that this concern does not and never has posed as a philanthropic institution. Perhaps because of early "diffidence," the executive heads have been possessed of a more than ordinarily deep sense of justice and fair play toward their associates and the public, and these, in turn, may have inspired many of the seemingly revolutionary policies that have been put into practice. But these policies have only been made operative after it had been determined that they would prove sound.

It may seem a cynical thing to say, but it is a scientific fact that practically everything anyone does is based on his conception of self-interest or self-gratification. And this applies to our noblest as well as to our meanest actions. We do the things which we consciously or subconsciously believe will satisfy our spiritual or material desires. This is as it should be and upon a little thought will be seen to harmonize perfectly with the loftiest teachings and the most altruistic ambitions. Even unselfishness is selfish.

Therefore, when our men work overtime they do so because it is distinctly to their own personal advantage as well as from a sense of loyalty to the organization and the enjoyment they get out of their work. And the organization, in turn, has made it possible for the individual to profit from extra effort, not only from a sense of justice and fairness, but also as a means of insuring its own successful operation.

Often the things which we do as a means of satisfying our own sense of fairness will react, unexpectedly, to our own material advantage and it will be found that we have actually uncovered a principle which, if intelligently applied, will solve many of our most serious problems. Such a thing happened with the opening of the second Skaggs store.

When the second store was opened it became necessary to employ someone to operate it and the owner of both stores—believing earnestly in the principle that every man is entitled to share in the profits he helps to create and desiring, sincerely, to provide the new man with every opportunity and incentive—hit upon the plan of paying the manager of the new store a nominal salary plus 20 percent of the net profits of his store, such share of the net profits to be paid every three months.

It should be made clear that the plan of compensation decided upon for the first Skaggs manager resulted, primarily, from the owner's desire to be absolutely fair with his associate. However, it was also obvious that such an arrangement would make the manager's personal earnings dependent, to a large extent, upon his own effort, intelligence and efficiency and tend to insure his enthusiastic co-operation in the methods which the success of the first Skaggs store had demonstrated to be fundamentally correct.

That this plan of sharing the profits with the men who helped to earn them was the result of a more or less idealistic impulse did not, in the least, detract from its practical value, both to the employer and the employee, and its continuation and elaboration to the present time, constitutes one of the most important foundations upon which this vast organization rests. The spirit which it exemplifies has attracted to us the highest type of men and women to be found in any similar business in the world, but for whose loyalty, interest and intelligence it would be impossible for us to successfully operate our more than 200 widely scattered stores.
