FORM UPSETS.
Form reversals of the present season in college football may cause trial coaches to view future schedules in a different light.

The undefeated teams of 1925 are few and far between. A number of eleven, considered among the best in the country, have been trimmed several times.

In the past it has been customary for coaches with a nine-game schedule to look at least six big games, sometimes seven. Usually a soft spot was picked for the opener and then another breathing spell about mid-season.

The 1925 football campaign has definitely proved that it is impossible to keep a team on edge for four or five successive big games.

CASE OF PENN.
Take the case of Pennsylvania. When Yale was defeated by that team, eastern experts said Penn had the best eleven in the east, one of the greatest of all time.

It looked that way against Yale. The following Saturday Penn had just enough left to gain a 7-0 decision over Chicago.

Illinois had the ideal spot on the Penn schedule, for prior to the Yale and Chicago game, the Philadelphia institution had scored a 9-0 victory over Brown.

On edge for three weeks, Penn faltered badly against Illinois and with Grange running wild, the game developed into an awful rout of the team that had been so highly touted.

Before it had a chance to recover from the Illinois trouncing, along came Pittsburg all primed for the game and gave the Penn team another decisive setback.

Unquestionably Penn has a great team, but the schedule was too hard. It just couldn't go the route.

OTHER VICTIMS.
Yale, the Army and Nebraska are just a few of the other teams that can be mentioned as the victims of a tough schedule, also, being too strongly pointed for a certain game.

After Yale lost to Penn, the Ell coaches began preparing for the Army game. Experts conceded West Point as having one of its best teams in years. Yale walloped the Army, but couldn't hold its edge for Princeton.

For years the Army has been a door mat for Notre Dame. This year, knowing Notre Dame had a green team, the Army pointed for the game with Ketchikan's pupils, thereby planning to wipe out some past disgrace on the gridiron.

The Army delivered against Notre Dame. It looked like a great team that day, but two weeks later proved rather easy for Yale, going under in the final period.

Since the success of a coach is judged by the games won and lost column, close supervision of the football schedule would be a wise system.

Trojans at Home to
W. S. C. Eleven Today

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Football is making its last stand in the far west and today brings together only four eleven at widely distant points.

These games will be played at Los Angeles between the University of Southern California and Washington State college, and at Denver, where eleven of Colorado college and Colorado Mines clash.

While the encounter at Los Angeles has Pacific coast conference hearing it will not go toward determining a championship in that division. The University of Washington has seen to that. By routing Oregon 15 to 14 at Seattle Thursday the Washington Huskies clinched the conference title with five victories and no defeats. They have no more games to play.

The final conference game will be played on December 3 at Los Angeles at Southern California opposing the Oregon Aggies. Then should the University of Southern California win both the games it will go into a tie with Stanford for second place with four victories and one defeat.

As Spaghetti Prices Soar
Italy's Partition is Treated
ROME, (AP)—Wounds of war scarcely could be more painful than wounds of peace which are coming to Italians in form of restricted rations of spaghetti, macaroni and ravioli, those pillars of the Cis-Alpine cuisine.

With Italy making an effort to rid itself of the need of wheat imports by the erection of tariff walls, the domestic supply as yet is insufficient. As a result, prices of spaghetti and other food pastes have soared to such prohibitive heights that vast numbers of people are forced to reduce their rations.

big and gripping that it takes hold of the emotions and twists them like a leaf in a storm.

"White Cargo" is a vivid love story of the tropics. The long unbroken run of the show in New York, London and Chicago established it as an offering of dynamic force and distinctive appeal, pronouncing it one of the biggest and most sensational plays ever seen. The applause that follow scene after scene and the sum of commendatory discussion throughout the house is something not heard in theaters in a long time. The audience by its repeated applause admits its bigness.

"White Cargo" is nothing if not daring. Don't forget that a moment but—remember this also—it took bad women to make history and empires crumble. When you see "White Cargo" you'll think

What Makes Good Flour?

Every woman knows there's a difference in flour—good flour, ordinary flour, poor flour. What makes the difference?

Modern milling done by expert millers who have learned through years of experience how to get a smooth, consistent quality—laboratory and kitchen tests to maintain that degree of quality—selected wheat graded for proper uses. Those are the elements that help make FEDERATION such a popular brand in the kitchens of competent cooks.

Try a sack—you'll buy it regularly. Easy and inexpensive to use.
