visibly and high morale of the personnel participating," the report said, singling out the air unit of the Twenty-ninth Division (Maryland), as particularly praiseworthy among the fourteen divisional organizations now federally recognized. Difficulties met last year in getting pilot replacements for the guard had been overcome, it was added.
RECOMMENDS DIVORCE. WASHINGTON (By the Associated Press)—Divorce of the militia bureau of the war department from the general staff control through appointment of an assistant secretary to handle all national guard affairs under appropriations separate from those for the regular army, is recommended by Major General George C. Rickards, head of the Pennsylvania National Guard in his annual report made public today as chief of the bureau.
Progress of the national guard has been hindered as a whole, General Rickards declared, by "the tendency of the war department general staff to take over certain administrative functions of the chief of the militia bureau."
"It should be apparent to the general staff," the report continued, "that the militia bureau has a competent staff of regular army officers who are familiar with the national guards of all the states, and know their problems through more intimate contact with them than it is possible for any other war department agency to have."
WORK MAKES REPORT. WASHINGTON (By the Associated Press)—Protection of the government's timber lands, a revision of its reclamation policy, and a prompt and sympathetic study by congress of the Alaskan problem, are the chief recommendations contained in the annual report of the interior department submitted to congress by Secretary Work.
Administration of the department the past fiscal year was shown to have cost $10,137,463 less than the previous one, and savings of $32,649,926 were effected in the last two years.
Recommendations for measures to protect the timber reserves were based on the secretary's prediction that at the present rate of consumption the country will soon be faced with a timber famine, and as a means of rehabilitating the government's timber lands, a revision of the present government acreage would remain intact for 19 years. This act, which provides for the outright sale of public timber land, was passed by congress almost 50 years ago—long prior to the adoption of the national forest policy.
"Abuses have occurred in the past under the operation," said the report, and while subsequent measures to prevent speculation and to obtain a fair price for the timber sold by the government had been operated successfully at the expense of the government, the method was not preserving the timber.
"As soon as it passes into private ownership," the report explained, "the marketable timber is usually cut and sold, young growth damaged, and brush left as a fire menace."
The section of the Timber and Stone Act relating to timber was said to be obsolete, and should, the report asserted, be replaced, the leasing or sale of stone deposits to be continued.
"I believe," said the secretary, "congress should authorize discontinuing the sale of government-owned standing timber for a ten-year period. In Oregon this plan would defer temporarily the amount going to the railroad and wagon road companies and the counties from timber not yet sold. The increased receipts which would accrue from later handling of the timber and resources would, however, more than compensate, nevertheless, for this delay in disposition."
Calling attention to the fact that the reclamation fund, originally intended to resolve or be funded in ten years, had not been funded in 20 years, and that there are large tracts of productive lands on reclamation projects for which there are no settlers, the secretary declared that "until measures have been put into effect to solve these problems of settlement and development and the old projects have been made self-sustaining, the ad-

Such Is Life "Eighteen years ago I had three ribs broken; fourteen years ago my right leg; eleven years ago I nearly went over with typhoid fever and since then have had what stomach and liver trouble. Was filled with gas most all the time. I would have colic attacks so bad as to become unconscious. No medicine helped me and doctors advised an operation. One day talking with a stranger he recommended May's Wonderful Remedy, which helped me at once." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists.—Adv.
