owner, his neighbors, and many other dog owners who are horrified and angered by the act. Mrs. Frank Swanton, an executive officer of the Oregon Humane society, with headquarters at Portland, has been notified and a telegram is expected from her momentarily. It is likely, officers believe, that she will send an officer to La Grande to assist in the investigation.

Dog's Habits Were Good.

Asked by a reporter this morning as to whether "Rex" had any bad habits, Mrs. Wetzel replied that as far as she knew he had none. "The neighbors have told me that the dog never molested anything, except occasionally chasing a cat which any dog will do. He never bothered chickens and I never have heard of him biting anyone. He was a great pet and was far more valuable to us than what he might be worth in dollars and cents."

According to her, the dog must have left his home shortly after 3 o'clock. "Several dogs were playing in the yard about that time and I think he was with them, although I am not certain," she said. "The last time I saw him was after I fed him at noon."

Immediately upon notification of the death of his dog, Mr. Wetzel offered a $50 reward. Clint Hayden, the Wing, Pin and Plectfoot club, Roy Currey, the District News, The Observer, W. C. Crews have offered $10 each, Ward Fowler, Joe Whitley, and H. W. Howard have added $5 each, and more contributions are coming in rapidly. Roy Currey is receiving notifications of rewards.

"Rex" was a registered dog, a splendid specimen of his breed. He is described as a harmless, friendly household pet, willing to make friends with all.

SENATE AND DAWES WILL CLASH SOON

honored custom of swearing in new senators in small groups. The Administration leaders during the brief special session of the senate last March were able to hold off any open and vitriolic attacks on Mr. Dawes from the floor such as some senators had planned, but they expect some efforts at the "hazing" of the vice-president during the next few months.

Gulf is Widened.

The gulf which was opened between the vice president and some senators on March 4 has been widened by the campaign he has conducted during the summer in the states or some senators who come up for reelection next year.

These senators naturally have not taken kindly to this campaign and they can be counted upon to oppose the vice president in his rules fight with all of the vigor and influence at their command.

Mr. Dawes has some support in the senate itself for a modification of the rule under which a single senator at the close of a session can block legislation or even at any time in the session long delay a final vote by means of a filibuster.

Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican floor leader, and Senator Underwood of Alabama, a former-Democrat leader, favor a change in the rules, but they concede that there is an overwhelming sentiment in the senate against any change that will put a check on the right of senators to speak as long and as often as they may desire on any subject.

Pollard, pastor of the Baptist church. Burial will be in the family lot in the Masonic cemetery, beside her mother.

Secretary Davis May Act Upon Own Recommendations

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary Davis of the war department, has the unique distinction of having before him for approval a report signed by himself on his own activities as assistant secretary of war. The document is his annual report as assistant secretary to the secretary, and was signed by Mr. Davis before Secretary Weeks' resignation, although the former secretary did not act upon any of its recommendations, leaving it to his successor.

As assistant secretary and in charge of the general war department procurement program, as well as of the industrial mobilization planning, Mr. Davis stressed in his report the importance of representation of his office in the department's budgetary supervisory machinery.

"It was seemed to me of paramount importance," he said, "that in consideration of the army budget, my office should be represented in order to assist in determining the point of view of the supply branches. Past history has indicated that in general the appropriation needs of the supply branches are sacrificed to those of personnel, a condition which can be remedied only by constant watchfulness and continuing effort."

The arrangement for such supervision by the assistant secretary's office was made with Mr. Weeks' approval during the period covered by the report.

Explaining the methods for coordinating supply purchases and shaping them to the best available market conditions, the assistant secretary said he had established contact with other governmental agencies in order to obtain estimates on future market conditions as to commodities the army would purchase in quantity in any year. This information had been provided to purchasing officers in time for them to take advantage and plan their procurements under most favorable market trends, he said.

The report also disclosed that plans have been completed in a tentative way under which unified control of the railroads could be exercised in a war emergency of major proportions. It was formulated after extensive discussions with the Association of Railway Executives and is based on the statute authorizing the secretary of war to take over the roads, but contemplates that "actual operation and the carrying out of general policies will be left largely to existing railway organizations."

The report expressed concern over the rapid depletion of reserve stocks of equipment and supplies

How do you know it's good?

When you buy any product, you expect to get full value for your money.

But how do you know you're getting it? No wise person wants to take a chance every time he buys something new—or something he has not tested personally.

Here is a test you can rely upon for safe quality and full value: "Do you see the product you want advertised consistently and persistently?"

If you do, it is good value. No sane merchant or manufacturer would continue to spend good money advertising poor merchandise. Every advertised product has been tested for you—by hundreds of other people. They have bought and approved it—else it could not continue to be advertised.

Think of this when you are making your selection of any kind of product. Choose the one that is advertised—and your money is protected.
