and declared it fundamental that there should be full right to liberty and equality before the law without distinction of race or creed.

"Our country has many elements in its population," he said, "many different modes of thinking and life, all of which are striving in their own way to be loyal to the high ideals worthy of the crown of American citizenship. It is the duty of only another name for slavery."

Pressing his recommendations with a statement that "the country does not appear to require medical departments from the police already adopted so much as it needs further extension of these policies and the improvement of details" and an appeal for continued vigilance against extravagant government expenditures, the president emphasized the need for further tax reduction and declared he approved "in principle" the bill drafted by the ways and means committee.

"Insofar as income-tax exemptions are concerned," he continued, "it seems to me the committee has gone as far as it is safe to go and somewhat further than I should have gone."

Discusses Foreign Relations.
In a long discussion of foreign relations Mr. Coolidge made these assertions:

That the Locarno security agreements represent the success of the policy of having European countries settle their own political problems without involving the United States.

That reduction of land armaments not only is of prime importance but a problem peculiarly European in its political aspects, and that "our country would look with particular gratification upon any action which these countries might take to reduce their own military forces."

That "the general policy of our country is for disarmament, and it ought not to hesitate to adopt any practical plan that might reasonably be expected to succeed. But it would not care to attend a conference which from its location or constituency would in all probability prove futile."

That American participation in the world court would not mean involvement in the league of nations, but would "contribute greatly to the advancement of our ideals."

That debt settlements already negotiated "do not make us more liberal and are actually beneficial" and that "every reasonable effort will be made to secure agreements for liquidation with the remaining countries."

Turning to domestic issues the president advocated more emphasis on a selective service act for mobilization of materials as well as men in emergencies. The responsibility of the local community for "retraining" the demobilized soldier, the departments of war, navy and commerce "should each be provided with an additional assistant secretary, who will work with statutory duties and who would be available to make the decision of the secretary to give special attention to an investigation."

Figures Strong in Love.
"We must have in an strong and worthy of America" he said. "Provision should be made for use of the army air service. The responsibility to their duties should be awarded to active fighting officers in both army and navy."

With reference to prohibition, the president repeated his position as a whole, impressed although many localities and individuals still are in a disintegrating condition. In his opinion excessive drinking is very important. If the gaps are not filled, the engine will run unevenly when it is idling or on a slow "light" run. If the gaps are not filled the engine will be hard to start and will run on a heavy "load," the average "spacing" of 16/25 of an inch, or the thickness of a thin dime.

need their advice and energetic cooperation, the vigilant action of their police, and the jurisdiction of their courts to assist in enforcement. I request of the public observance, of the public officers continuing efforts for enforcement, and of the congress favorable action on the budget recommendation for the prosecution of this work."

With reference to railroads he recommended authority for consolidation under the supervision of the interstate commerce commission, and expressed gratification that railroad employees and employers are in substantial agreement as to legislation necessary to regulate and improve their relationship.

Would Encourage Waterpower.
Along with development of inland navigation, the president held, should be every possible encouragement for development of waterpower. He advocated investigation of expenditures and the success of laws in Alaska to determine whether too much money is being spent for administration and urged increased activity for the governor of the Philippines with a view to preparing the islands for "ultimate independence."

He also expressed the view that the time had come to consider civil service classification of all postmasters, collectors of customs and internal revenue and prohibition agents, and advanced passage of the District of Columbia of a mother's pension law that would serve as a model to the states.

VACCINATION IS ADVOCATED

and can be obtained through any local druggist. Even if it were expensive it is really more sane to give the serum to dogs than people, especially when one considers that one dog can infect several human beings."

While speaking of serum for rabies, Dr. Phy urged the use of another prophylactic serum to immunize a dog against distemper. Three injections of this are required and, unless given, owners of dogs are very likely to lose them through this increasingly prevalent disease.

Varus of Trichinosis.
"The Williams valley case of trichinosis," declared Dr. Phy "reminds us that while this disease may appear as an epidemic, it is also an endemic disease and that we must always be careful to cook our pork properly. It also awakens us to the instance of the rat. It is from these animals that hogs contract trichinosis."

Dr. Phy then briefly traced the development of trichinosis, showing how the spirilla bacteria, when taken in the hogs intestinal system from the hunches, entering finally in the diaphragm, the roof of the tongue and all muscular tissues. When we eat pork infected with trichinosis, the same cycle of development and attack is followed."

other man at midnight, just before the officers made the arrest.

Dr. McAdory was called as a witness, but he was ill and unable to appear in court today, as Carl G. Helm, district attorney, consented to admit the testimony as stated by H. L. Hess, lawyer for the defense.

Graham's wife is in Oregon City, where they now make their home, according to her husband's testimony.

The case was expected to go to the jury by 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Imbler Mrs. Sparks.

Mr. Cleaver, an ardent supporter of Imbler, spoke briefly before Dr. Phy was introduced by the chairman, Frank McKeon. Mr. Cleaver told of the fruit industry, showing slides, and also a high endorsement to the Grande Round Valley as a residential site. Mr. Cleaver's speech, as was Dr. Phy's, was greeted with ready will that did not go unappreciated.

Entertainment was organized by Mrs. Emma Hester, who sang "The Land of a Perfect Day" (entertainment) as an encore, and by the choruses of community members, which included the members of the home with the offering of harmony and melody "Moonlight and Roses" nicely selected the balance appetizing and a clever market arrangement of a dapper song resulted in greater applause than ever. A third encore was necessary before those present would permit the speaker to leave the stage.

"THE STORE WITH A CONSCIENCE"

When 19 Freight Cars Were Piled Up

A long string of freight cars on the Pennsylvania railroad got loose on the famous "hump" above Curve near Astoria, Ore., and rolled down a steep two-mile grade into the city. There the cars "cable-wiped" another string and were wrecked, blocking all traffic on the main line and killing two trainmen. The brakeman saved his life by running back along the tops of the cars. There are nineteen cars piled up in the heap shown.
