Zip! Laughs! Thrills! In Monty Banks' New Film

A scare—a laugh—a thrill—a love—a fall—a fortune.

Say it over and over and you'll know the story of "Keep Smiling." With Monty Banks the merry mirth-maker.

Yep, it's a smile that makes life worth while. As long as we can keep the old lower jaw from drooping, we've got the same chance that Monty had. Monty kept his teeth polished, gritted 'em and started out to be an inventor. The folk in the little fishing village gave him the merry ha, ha, but Monty tucked his water wings in his suitcase and hit the local for the big city.

He landed on the hard and unsympathetic pavement, and more things happened to him than there were pebbles on the beach back home, but Monty kept his eye on a goal—fame, fortune and feminine beauty. Monty got all three. He made his own luck. They mussed him up, but he always went back for more.

It's a fast and furious story, it's life, and the smile boys always get into the big swim.

"Keep Smiling" will be feature at the Arcade theatre Wednesday only.

"Blossom Time" Will Be Presented Here Tonight

Considerable interest has been aroused in musical and literary circles over the recently published statement that Franz Schubert, upon whose life the Messrs. Schubert operetta, "Blossom Time," is based, may have composed his scores with the thought in mind that many years hence they would be used for operettas and musical comedies.

Whether or not there is any foundation for such a belief, it is nevertheless interesting to listen to the various reasons that have been advanced by those who seem inclined to place more than average credence on such views.

Schubert's music has a peculiar lilting quality that is not found in the works of such masters as Wagner, Chopin, Beethoven, and others. The tempo is faster and there is a rythm even in his earliest works that compare favorably with the more modern music of Romberg, Schwartz, Goodman, Gilbert and others.

Another matter that lends weight to the discussion advanced by these theorists is the adaptability of Schubert's scores. Romberg adapted some of his earliest works for the story of "Blossom Time" and it is no secret, with famous Winter Garden composer that many of Schubert's scores were woven into the modern numbers without the change of a single note. At any rate the matter can well be left to the judgment of local theatregoers who will see "Blossom Time" at the Arcade theatre, where it will play tonight.

"Pony Express" Praised by Oakland Tribune

(From an editorial in The Oakland Calif. Tribune)

When motion picture enterprise calls upon painstaking research and scrupulous direction it achieves greatness.

For the benefit of the present generation that Hollywood colony, which is called frivolous and irresponsible, has brought back the life and atmosphere of early day California. It has set up in Sacramento, for instance, the J. street of the 60's peopled it with the men and women of the gold days, and given again, in the setting of high hats and aspirations, the dramatic moment when the first Pony Express catered from the east.

"The Pony Express" is a James Cruze production, for Paramount due at the Arcade theatre starting Thursday. Betty Compson, Ricardo Cortez, Ernest Torrence and Wallace Berry are featured.

Last Showing of "Drusilla" Will Be Tonight.

"Drusilla with a Million," showing at Sherrys tonight the adaptation of Elizabeth Cooper's popular novel of the same, proves how beautifully a best seller may be transplanted to the screen if scenario and director co-operate in turning out an artistic and finished job.

With Mary Carr in the title role, cast most fortunately as the little old lady, a charity patient in a Home, who suddenly inherits great wealth; and with Priscilla Bonner and Kenneth Harlan bearing the brunt of the interpretation of Love's Young Dream, the Associated Arts production which was directed by F. Harmon Weight is crammed with charming comedy, wistful pathos, and drama of the most perfect sort. Seldom if ever has a more powerful scene been staged than that in the courtroom where the frightened little woman is arraigned in defense of her philanthropic work in befriending orphan babies. Here too the lawyer who is acting for the disinherited young Collin Arnold in trying to oust Drusilla form her newly found wealth is confronted with Collin's wife, a young mother with a babe in her arms for whom Collin has long searched in vain. Tense drama and a thundering wallop vie in the production with tears and laughter.

The comedy of the servants in the Arnold home, ministering to the simple soul, who has so lately been a slave in a charity institution is beautifully developed, as well as the laughable situations which arise from the injection of a score or so of babies into the menage. The picture is one long delight; fresh, wholesome and thoroughly human.

Claire Du Bray and William Humphries are among the featured members of a remarkable cast.

Hoxie Is Coming To Star as Daring Horseman

Two mysterious shots on two different occasions save the life of Dane Gordon, the young hero of "The Demon," Blue Streak Western, starring Jack Hoxie, which comes to the Star theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

The first shot comes as Gordon is leading a sheriff's posse into Slocum Valley in pursuit of a band of outlaws who have been a destroying the property of ranchers. The entrance to the valley is through a narow pass which the outlaws had mined. The signal for the firing of the mine was to be one shot fired when Gordon and the posse arrived at the entrance. Just as the posse was about to enter the valley a shot rang out. The outlaw left behind to explode the dynamite, thinking it the signal, fires the charge. It is premature and the posse enters unharmed.

The outlaws are captured, with the exception of their leader, "Bat" Jackson. Gordon pursues him. Jackson waits in ambush for the oncoming Gordon. Gordon's life seems to be nearing its end, for the hidden Jackson has him covered and is just about to shoot when another mysterious shot rings out and "Bat" drops mortally wounded. Who fired these timely shots is cleverly concealed until just before the picture ends.

In "The Demon" Jack Hoxie is again the wild rider of the plains, and in this he is ably seconded by Universal's famous Ranch Riders.

"The Demon" is a clean, thrilling picture play and Cliff Smith, who directed it, has given it some beautiful scenic touches. The supporting cast is headed by Lois Todd, one of Universal's young leading women. Others in the cast are William Welsh, Jere Austin, George Grandee and Al Jennings.
