SNOW SQUALLS HIT WALLOWA

WALLOWA, Ore., (Special)—Weather conditions over this section of the country have changed considerably during the past week. A number of snow squalls have visited both the valley and higher sections of the country, the snow has melted away rapidly as the ground is not froze any to speak of at this time. The water has gone into the soil in fine shape. Despite the large amount of rain which fell here since early fall, the ground has not been wet to a depth of more than three of four inches, until the recent storms. Farmers are greatly pleased to see moisture of sufficient quantities fall at this time in order that the ground will become soaked before is still reported to be quite low at many places over the country, as the moisture has not become soaked into the ground yet to cause the wells to raise much. Fall sown wheat and grass continue to make good growth. Practically all stock are in the pastures yet, and are doing fine. Stock as a rule are in much better condition at this time than is generally the rule at this season of the year. Sales of hay are said to be quite slow at this time, as no feeding to speak of has been done this fall the saving in feed has been great.

J. L. Maxwell, local stock buyer shipped a car of cattle to the Portland market the last of the week.

John Couch of Leap, went to Portland the latter part of the week.

Many persons over the country are still suffering from severe colds and "Grip."

Fred Ranes and wife of Leap left recently for a visit with relatives in Portland. Mr. Ranes expects to be gone a short time, while Mrs. Ranes will remain away for some time.

George Cassins was busy butchering his hogs the latter part of the week. Sam Meek and T. M. Gastin were helping him.

Bruce Fisher of Leap has been busy hauling wod to Wallowa recently.

The roads in this section of the country are quite muddy at this time, particulary the old dirt roads. Travel in the hill sections with auto is quite difficult at this time.

SALEM, Ore.—Trial of the case of Gustav Dunkelberger to recover $2000 from the board of regents of Oregon Agricultural college for alleged breach of contract has been set before Judge Skipworth of Lane county at Corvallis.

It was charged by plaintiff that other teachers later were employed by the board of regents with the result that the tuition was split four ways, and he lost an aggregate of $2000.

FIRE DAMAGES COLLEGE HALL

CORVALLIS, Ore., — Damage estimated at $100,000, injury to one fireman and narrow escapes on the part of several students and faculty members resulted from a fire here yesterday afternoon which destroyed the central portion of Science hall, in which the chemistry work of the campus is located.

A backfire in the gas line supplying the building from a gasoline generator system caused two terrific explosions, which blew the meters off on every floor of the four-story stone structure. Two of these in the stockroom, on the ground floor, spread flames to the heavy stock of chemicals, starting a fire so stubborn that the crack Corvallis department was more than an hour in getting it entirely under subjection.

Walter Backus, a hoseman working near a window of the stockroom, was knocked down by a third explosion 15 minutes after the first one. He was taken to the health service nearby temporarily blinded by flying chemicals. His injury is not thought to be serious.

SITE FOR FARM LEASED

SALEM, Ore. — The attorney-general approved a lease entered into between the county court of Hood River county and the Caldwell-Dunham Investment company, whereby the county has acquired a site of 25 acres for the agricultural experiment farm authorized under an act of the last legislature.

The legislature at the time of authorizing the plant appropriated $12,000, but specified in the law that none of this money was to be used in purchasing or erecting buildings.

At the expiration of the lease existing between Hood River county and the Caldwell-Dunham Investment company the county will receive title to the site.
