Flames Mysteriously Shoot Out of Cold Water Pool

SEATTLE (AP)—Flames which shoot high in the air from a pool of cold, salty water, in Green River canyon, 26 miles southeast of Seattle, are attracting much attention.

WEATHER LIKE SPRING. BROWNSVILLE, Ore. — "More like spring than winter," the old-timers in the Calapooia river valley are saying. Frank Howe, who has been in the state 50 years, says he "never has seen the like in Oregon" but remembers that in his boyhood Massachusetts enjoyed just such a winter. Mr. Howe recalls one winter in the 90s when Portland had a snow two feet deep which put out of commission the gas plant, horse-drawn street cars and all business in the downtown district.

Owing to the warm sunshine, the tulips simply won't behave and one woman here found a bright red one in bloom. Her tulips are out of doors. Tea roses and hybrid perennials are still blooming here as are marigolds, salvia, hollyhocks, snapdragons and poppies.

Nearly 100,000 goats, 2,000,000 horses and cattle, and 6,000,000 sheep are now grazing under permit in the national forests of the United States.

Water in the pool, which is about six feet in diameter, sometimes sinks almost out of sight. Then it rises, troubled with the gas passing through it. If a lighted match is thrown in while it is turbulent, fire rises.

At times the eruptions are particularly violent, throwing out rocks and sending flames 100 feet high. At rare intervals the geyser falls to work at all. These variations have not been explained.

A short distance from the geyser, flames play for two weeks at a time over water which bubbles up between rocks in a stream. Although the water in the geyser pool is salty, and contains many minerals, it is within ten feet of a perfectly fresh brook. Sulphur and fresh water are found near by.

The phenomenon is near the bank of Green river, from which Tacoma gets its water supply. Although rumors of "water that burns" had been spread by Indians and hunters, the place was inaccessible until a road was built in last year.

"The Teaser," Lively Comedy, At Arcade Today

"Make 'em laugh—make 'em cry—make 'em wait!" This formula of David Belasco's for a successful play was never better exemplified than in "The Teaser." Universal sensational new comedy romance, starring Laura La Plante and featuring Pat O'Malley, playing at the Arcade Theatre, today and Tuesday. The story, adapted from the famous manuscript by Adelaide Matthews and Martha Stanley, was a sensational fiction success, and as a screen vehicle is fully an entertaining.

Laughs are the principal ingredients—comical situations and screamingly funny troubles besetting the path of a pair of as ill-matched lovers as a author ever conceived; a society girl and a cigar-drummer! The romance underlying the laughs, however, is full of heart interest, and there are a few heart-thrills—and even a few thrills, a spic of mystery and a bit of excitement—and the most laughs.

Miss La Plante is alighting as the blonde flirter at a cigar counter, meets a debonaire but rather unsmooth salesman (Pat O'Malley), falls in love, and faces family opposition that results in her resolve to flirt with all married men in fact, not to loose her old.

The salesman, in the meantime, takes lessons in etiquette from a deposed Russian duke, learns the gentle art of using a fork at dinner, and becomes a venerated aristocrat about the time the girl is mixed up in a divorce scandal. His petting jealous adds to the hilarity.
