Pollution of Mississippi River Affects Water Source

ST. PAUL, (AP)—Bacteriologists are now diagnosing the serious illness of "The Fathers of Waters," who is suffering from a severe attack of "pollution," contracted from "Twin Cities" sewers. In its incipency the trouble could have been remedied by a comparatively small sum, but now, engineers estimate, it will cost the Twin Cities approximately $25,000,000 for a cure.

Back in 1914 the Minneapolis city council discussed the pollution of the Upper-Mississippi river, but no action was taken until the Minnesota State Board of Health recently warned the Twin Cities that something must be done. The sister cities voted $7,000 jointly to test the Upper Mississippi at regular intervals to determine the extent and seriousness of the pollution.

termining the extent and seriousness of the pollution. Engineers have advised the construction of intercepting sewers flowing into a single huge disposal or settling tank for both cities. A plant of sufficient size would cost approximately $25,000,000 they estimate. Municipalities along the Mississippi as far south as La Crosse, Wis., have complained of the condition of the river.

La Grande Theatres

"Annie Rooney" Has the Punch From the Start.

For the first time since Mary Pickford produced the original "Teas of the Storm Country," she took the opening scene of a picture on the first day of production in "Little Annie Rooney," now at Sierrys.

There is real "punch in the opening scene, and there is no let down in interest until the final shot.

The initial scene shows Mary perched Santa Claus fashion, in the opening of a chimney surmounting a shed in New York's tenement district. A "gang" fight of considerable proportions is in progress among some children and Little Annie is first in the role of innocent bystander "of father" by sister. As such she is the recipient of a variety assortment of hot-iron, stones and Irish confetti.

Corinne Griffith In New Film Tale Of Neglected Love

Neglected love is the theme of Griffith's latest First National release, "Infatuation," coming to the Arcade theatre Wednesday and Thursday. The picture is based on W. Somerset Maugham's "Casuarina and Wife," which achieved notable success on the stage. The story is doubly allocated in London and Egypt. It concerns the flirtation of the wife of an English ambassador to Cairo and her eventual return to the husband whom she thought had neglected her.

'MA' DOES NOT LIKE SOCIETY

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The homely-looker of the chicken yard or the quiet of a rose garden give Miriam A. Ferguson success from the turmoil which sometimes swirls about the governor's chair. A glimpse of the intimate life of the woman governor was caught when, at the height of the political-highway controversy, she slipped away to trim her rose bushes, buy clothes in Temple her home town, and incidentally pay her poll tax. Despite the fairy stories about Mrs. Ferguson, homely and beautiful, big and little, ignorant and intelligent, here are some of the actual facts about her: She feeds her chicks. Eats "poor man's bread" and turnip greens. Wears low-heeled shoes. Drives her automobile. Does not wear bathed hair. Spread on a little rouge. Does not care for "society." Does not smoke. Occasionally tells Jim, her husband, where to head in. Does not permit Jim to keep a cow in the pasture yard. Mrs. Ferguson does not put on high-toned airs. She dresses neatly. Last summer she wore light organdie dresses of mild shades. This fall and winter her gowns run to dark colors, blue and black satin. She prefers black or tan shoes, according to the dress she is wearing. The governor's hair is black streaked with gray, and is worn in a coil around her head. Her usual office hours are from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. She and her husband frequently occupy opposite sides of a flat top desk, dividing the work between them. Sometimes Mr. Ferguson, the former governor, uses an ante room next to the executive office for consulting visitors, while his wife sits within the executive office proper interviewing callers. Mrs. Ferguson has been known to thumb the flat top desk with her womanly fist and inform Jim just who is governor. She takes time from work to chat with women secretaries in the office about everyday things women are interested in. On the second floor of the capitol is a small room, reached from the governor's office by a private iron stairway, where the governor may disappear for rest or study. Mrs. Ferguson's chief interest is Jim Ferguson, and when she drops her lightning eye on "his something special for Jim," it generally means one of those Texas dishes, not the least of which the poor man's corn bread made without milk or eggs. She cares little for social life and most of her entertaining is done when "folks just drop in." The state pays her $4,000 a year salary, one of the smallest. Governor's salaries in the Union, and allows her $5,000 a year expenses for the mansion, including maintenance of the grounds, fuel and light. Sandy Asks Road Completion. SANDY, Ore.—A large Sandy and Sandyridge delegation appeared before the county court at Oregon City asking for an appropriation of $7,000 to complete the building of another small stretch of market road No. 33. This is the Oregon Trail market road from Sandy to Eagle Creek.
