INDIAN RELICS UNCOVERED

CLAREMONT, Cal. (AP)—A perfectly preserved Indian water jug, believed to be at least 1000 years old, and a new series of Indian cliff writings were found by Wight M. Pierce of Pomona, Calif., on a recent trip into the Mojave desert and the Palm Springs region.

The jug two feet high and a foot and a half in diameter, was covered with red and blue paint. It was discovered in a gully in a cliff, and evidently had been set there by the Indians. The rocks were carefully packed around it.

The writings were found near the jug.

The young people of today are not so old. It is the young people of tonight who cause the trouble.

TWAIN'S SHOP MADE LIBRARY

KEOKUK, Iowa (AP)—A rare piece of Americana—a copy of the Keokuk city directory of 1856, part of which was hand set by Mark Twain and in which he listed himself as an "antiquarian"—recently was found and subsequently lost in a curious manner.

The Iowa State Insurance company acquired and incorporated in its office building an adjoining structure in which Orion Clemens, brother of the humorist, conducted a printing establishment in Keokuk in the late '50s. In making alterations a copy of the directory was found beneath the floor of the room in which the youthful Samuel Clemens worked.

The find was made by a workman, who, not knowing the book's sentimental and bibliophile value, examined it casually, and then tossed it aside in a pile of rubbish. Later, news of the discovery became known, but by that time the book had disappeared. The only other known copy of the directory is in the Keokuk Public Library.

Although the building that housed the old Clemens printing shop virtually has been rebuilt, the room in which Mark Twain worked has been left untouched. It has been set aside as a museum and library for the display of his souvenirs, one of the most interesting being the old printing case. Other objects include an oil painting of the writer at twenty-one, a later portrait, first editions and autographed copies of Twain's books.

The Mark Twain tradition thrives lustily in this Mississippi river town, where he made his first after-dinner speech and received pay for his first newspaper writing. In addition to the printing shop, the old Twain home still stands.

While still in his teens, Mark left Hannibal, Mo., where he had been working on Orion's newspaper, for a tour of the east, rejoining the family at Muscatine, Ia. There Orion and started a newspaper after his Hannibal enterprise had failed. Samuel presently left Muscatine for St. Louis, where the printing trade offered better prospects.

Orion moved to Keokuk, later to be visited by Samuel, who was prevailed upon to remain for a promised $5 a week.

Clemens was just approaching his majority, and with the urge of youth, he wanted to see the world. He thought a fortune was to be made in Brazil, so he prepared to depart. Tossing down to St. Louis to bid good-bye to his mother, he reached back here with an idea that his later career.

The idea was to write travel letters of his journey for the Keokuk Daily Post. George Deek, editor, offered him $5 each for the articles. Samuel, much pleased, made a fresh start and got as far as Cincinnati, which became the terminus of the projected South American trip.

Clemens contributed three letters to the Post, completed in the exaggerated dialect considered humorous in that day, speaking in one of them of a plan to write a book of his journey. Ten years or so later he did make a journey around the world, and from this came "The Innocents Abroad," and a secure fame.

they remove the cause of the disease. If it wasn't intended for us to have all our organs, we wouldn't have been given them. The fact is we need every piece of human machinery we possess—to keep them working properly that is the problem at times. Cutting them out may sometimes relieve the condition for the time, but haven't we "paid too much for our whistle." To lose a valuable organ when the mechanism of the body could have been set to working normally by a few Chiropractic Adjustments is next to criminal. Why not employ the common sense method of removing the disease instead of removing the organ?

SSY, Boy you talk about remarkable bargains; we have got some to offer you now that are almost too numerous to mention, but just to give you an idea we will name a few. 1x3 sheeting lumber to go underneath shingles. $47 per M. This is about $2.00 under the wholesale price. Then we have some paint that we are selling for 50c on a dollar as long as it lasts. We have some curly fir finished lumber that will take a beautiful stain, for $29.00 per M. From the general talk that is going around there is going to be a lot of building in the spring and the building material prices are already advancing, so why not use a little turkey sense and buy some material now while you can get it so cheap. We will wait on you but not for the money.

Yours truly

EASTERN OREGON HAS BIG DEMAND FOR EWE LAMBS

PENDLETON, Ore.—Keen demand for ewe lambs to be used in replenishing breeding flocks is proving a big factor in the contracting of the 1926 crop of lambs, according to statements by lamb buyers who purchase thousands of head in Oregon each season. Few flock owners are offering their ewe lambs for sale, and where both ewes and lambs are offered prices asked are higher than for many years.

Contracting is under way in eastern Oregon counties and a number of sales have been made. Prices reported range from 10c to 11 1/2 cents per pound with $1 per head down without interest. Delivery to be made around September 1.

In one case the bid price reported to have been 11 1/2 cents per pound, but in this deal the contract was entered into by the buyer with the acquisition of the ewe end of the lamb flock for breeding purposes as the chief consideration. Some sheep men are refusing to consider less than 13 cents per pound, but so far as can be learned, no deals have been made on this basis.

Cross bred ewe lambs are in highest demand, due largely to the report that the cross bred met with favor in the eyes of blue-wool breeders. Washington also takes a great many Oregon breeding ewes and lambs.

One buyer pointed out that Oregon should not be concerned about outside demands for ewe lambs.

They should be saved and kept at home. "It's actual checks," said he, "it has been found that 65 per cent of Oregon's flocks are composed of ewes 4 years old or older. That means just one third that that new blood must be introduced into the flocks. This stocking cannot safely be postponed any longer."

Market report shows the price of wheat is advancing. May be trying to catch up with bread prices.
