Would Remove Pictures of Statesmen in Women's Room

LONDON, (AP)—Pictures of eminent male statesmen hang on the paneled walls of the little room which is set aside for the use of the four women members of Parliament.
 The women members have not made any objection to those male intruders, but women who are less busy with the affairs of state complain that states-women should not be forced to look at men politicians all day in the House and then compelled to look at more men when they withdraw to their private apartment to rest and look after their correspondence.

Bridge of God-Work Delayed

CASCADE LOCKS, Ore.—Twenty men from Portland have arrived in Stevenson and Cascade Locks to work on the Bridge of the Gods, which is being constructed across the Columbia river at this place, but owing to some technicality in regard to the O. W. R. & N. railroad land the work on the Oregon side of the river is being temporarily held up. The cement pier on the Oregon side which was built about two years ago, will be greatly enlarged as a result of the change in the plans.

Oklahoma Dogs' Rights Before Supreme Court

OKLAHOMA CITY, (AP)—A revolt against dogs' rights—acquired during the federal days of England—is in progress in Oklahoma.
 The common law principle of scotcher, which was established when canine pets of Norman oppressors were permitted with impunity to wreak destruction on Saxon flocks, has been passed down intact to the statute books of Oklahoma—a state not yet twenty years old. The principle means simply that a dog owner is not responsible for the depredation of his animals if he is not aware of their mischievous nature.

It was one thing, declares associates of canine perogative, for dogs to destroy federal flocks which were mere articles of exchange, and something else for them to slaughter modern turkeys that have a commercial value of around 50 cents a pound during the holiday season.
 With the aim of curtailing some of an Oklahoma dog's privileges, C. C. McDonald of Wagoner county is seeking to have the state supreme court pass for the third time on a case involving this principle.

The litigation started in 1920 when fifteen turkeys belonging to McDonald were killed by dogs.

ARIZONA TO BE LISTED
 EUGENE, Ore.—Plans are being made for the forest service to list all available airplane landing fields in western Oregon, according to a letter received yesterday by R. S. Shelley, supervisor of the Ruskay national forest from O. A. Waha, assistant district forester in Portland.
 This is an anticipation that the airplane patrol will again be in operation in western Oregon and Washington during the summer of 1926. Mr. Waha says in his letter.

Fields 100 feet wide and 500 feet long can be used, it was stated, although a field with a minimum width of 75 feet could be used if it is situated right, according to Mr. Waha.

Mining About Baker Proceeds
 HAKELI, Ore.—The Snow Creek Mining company in the Greenhorn district of which Ray Parkhurst and other Portland business men are the owners, is pushing construction, and its stamp mill will be in operation soon. In the meantime development work in the mine is progressing and large bodies of ore being blocked out ready for shipment. Sixteen men are employed at the mine. Little difficulty is experienced from snow, and the roads are kept open by a motor plow run by a tractor. Snow has fallen in the upper mining camps. Mine development is proceeding all over the county.

SALEM STORM RECALLED
 SALEM, Ore.—Forty-six years ago the worst storm in the history of the Willamette valley struck Salem. The roof was torn off the state capital building while Sacred Heart academy and a large number of dwellings were badly damaged. Hugs trees were uprooted and farm buildings were destroyed.

Details of the storm were recounted here by Hal Patton, who for many years has been engaged in the mercantile business here.
