SALVATION ARMY RECEIVES MONEY FROM CONCERT

The receipt of $315 from the benefit musical that La Grande musicians gave for the Salvation Army Friday evening is acknowledged gratefully today by Envoy J. C. Barker.

"A family of six hungry children that we discovered this week in a home where the father has been out of work for some time is grateful, too," added the envoy. "Our relief fund was gone, and we had had a hard time to meet the suffering that this cold weather brought without the aid of the money that the concert gave us."

Ministering to starved souls as well as to starved bodies, the Salvation Army continues its indoor camp meetings at the hall each evening. The Rev. J. A. Hall, pastor of the Methodist church, solemnly preached last night on "The Way of Salvation." About 25 were in the audience. This evening Envoy and Mrs. Barker will conduct the service, which is to be featured by evangelistic music.

Blowe is considered one of the most criminal lawyers in the south and one of the readiest stamp speakers.

He knows more cotton mill workers personally than any living man, and the masses of the people in South Carolina believe that they have in him at last no aristocratic front and that they have in power. He is the champion "finer" and lodge member of the south.

One accomplishment which seems curious in this Jeffersonian individualist was putting through an act prohibiting the sale of cigars and cigar papers in South Carolina. (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

ten girls came down to the pier to greet us with songs and music and to decorate each passenger with leis or wreaths.

Views Famous Crater. At the pier we took autos for the crater of Kilauea, "the home of everlasting fire," which is the chief attraction of the island. It is some thirty miles from the port, a delightful ride. The latter part being through a fern forest. One might almost expect to see prehistoric animals stalking about its cool, thin summer clothes. As we might see there are no snakes or wild animals on the island. We started out in beautiful sunshine, many of the passengers wearing cool, thin summer clothes. As we began to climb the mountain and neared the crater the clouds appeared, then a mist, soon a good rain, then almost a cloud burst. We were up in the clouds. The wind blew a hurricane and many of the passengers were drenched, but all were game and determined to stick it out to the very top. When we arrived at the rim of the crater we could not see a foot below us and retraced our steps much disappointed. Around the crater is a most interesting section, with heat emanating from fissures in the volcanic rock by which you could readily cook an egg or a steak.

At the crater there is a good hotel, the Volcano Inn, where we had an excellent lunch. We started for Hilo and were soon out of the rain in the mountains and back down into the sunshine of the valley. We passed through sugar cane fields, by sugar mills, tropical fruit trees, pineapple plantations and beautiful gardens and were soon on the ship again and started on our way to Honolulu, some one hundred and ninety-two miles away.

Sunday morning as we drew near to the harbor of Honolulu we had a real thrill when dozens of airplanes from the naval station, and army base came out to meet us. Within three hundred yards of the dock some fifty native boys came swimming around the ship diving for coins thrown by the passengers. As the ship berthed she was saluted by the music of a regimental band stationed on the pier.

Rare Flowers Seen. Here we landed for a three day stay. Sunday the passengers were free to enjoy themselves as they wished. We started to walk up town and had only gone two blocks when we were halted by a man in an auto. He asked us if we could have the pleasure of entertaining us with a morning's ride. He proved to be Captain Osee Rogers of the regular army stationed here. Upon learning we were interested in flowers Mr. Rogers took us to an old Hawaiian residence with a garden full of rare flowers and plants. The lady presented us with a bloom of the "Bird of Paradise," a very rare plant on the island. It was the admiration of all the passengers on the ship for several days. Such a delightful manner everyone has here trying to entertain every stranger who comes to the islands.

The next two days were spent sightseeing in our auto about the city and surrounding mountains. Tuesday at sunset the ship sailed amid streams of colored paper and showers of confetti and the songs, music and fireworks of our Hawaiian friends ringing in our ears. (To be continued.)
