Douglas MacLean Coming to Arcade in Famous Story

An unpaid but willing staff of approximately five thousand people helped Douglas MacLean cut and edit "Seven Keys to Baldpate," his pictureization of George M. Cohan's greatest comedy which comes to the Arcade theater Friday and Saturday.

Their services were rendered in the course of the numerous previews of which this and all other MacLean comedies are subjected before they are released to the general public.

Upon the completion of the actual camera work on "Seven Keys to Baldpate," the comedian, Director Fred Newmeyer, and other members of the staff carried the picture to the outlying theaters in the vicinity of Los Angeles. The picture was run before an average seven audience and the reaction of the spectators carefully noted.

This process was repeated until every dull moment in the picture had been eliminated. "The public is the ultimate consumer of motion picture entertainment," MacLean says. "Therefore the public is the best judge of what amuses them. No matter how funny a picture seems to be who made it, if the public doesn't laugh it isn't really funny. That is why he subject every picture to the acid test of the public's approval. Those portions of the picture that fail to get a laugh are eliminated and the edited picture given another trial running. Thus, such as we often run a picture ten times, approximately five thousand people aid us in making our decisions." Edith Roberts heads the supporting cast in "Seven Keys to helped along by the skillful playing of a stellar cast that includes Jack Holt, Florence Vidar, Nona Perry and Mary Brian. Irvin Willat, who directed, deserves a large share of the credit, and a word of praise is also in order for James Hamilton, the scenarist and Al Gilks, the cameraman.

That famous comedian, Harry Langdon is also being shown in his newest two reel comedy, "Boots in the Woods."

"Tides of Passion" At Sherrys Is Chockfull of Action

Her husband, a soldier, is ordered away, but promises to return at the earliest moment possible. Through eleven long years she waits patiently, hopefully.

When the husband does reappear it is with another wife. He dies soon, and then Charity—the first wife—takes her rival to her own home.

When infuriated townspeople threaten to punish Hagar, Wife No. 2, because she has become the mother of a fatherless child, Charity flies to her defense. She prevents her from throwing herself into the sea, and is herself caught with her on a narrow ledge of rock in the ocean, where the two are rescued with difficulty.

Then the two widows agree to be mothers to the boy together. This, in brief, is the story of "Tides of Passion," the big Vitaphone photoplay. Mae Marsh is the star, and she is supported by a fine cast of players, including Ben Henderson, Laska Winter, Earl Schenck, Ivor McFadden and Thomas Mills.

The picture is said to be overflowing with action. The romance is appealing, the suspense gripping, the thrills spine-tickling. J. Stuart Blackton made the picture for Vitaphone.

Comedy showing "The Sleuth," Memorial For Fanny Crosby, Blind Hymn Writer, Sought CHICAGO, (AP)—Plans for a memorial celebration and offering in honor of Fanny Crosby, the blind hymn writer, have been prepared by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, in observance of her birthday, March 23.

Miss Elizabeth Doten of Boston has written a pageant of her life for use in Sunday schools. "Fanny Crosby, in contrast with

HERE'S REAL RELIEF FROM NEURITIS

In 24 Hours Pains Cease and You Get Rest and Comfort Again.

To those doubting Thomases, who believe that all western productions are cast from the same mold, and are, therefore, as alike as the proverbial peas, we enthusiastically recommend a visit to the Star theater, where "The Enchanted Hill" is now playing a three day engagement.

This picture, used on Peter H. Kynne's latest novel, not only gives a new trail in outdoor photoplays, being possessed of a plot that develops along novel and original lines, but it is as modern and up-to-date as the newest Paris gown, dealing as it does with the West of today and employing such startling innovations as airplanes and machine guns.

A story of action, romance, mystery and intrigue is "The Enchanted Hill," which gets its title from the fact that the ranch house, around which the action centers, has been built on a very high hill commanding a magnificent view of the country for miles around.

The central character is Lee Purdy, a bold, brave and romantic ex-army aviator who comes to New Mexico, buys a cattle ranch and makes two discoveries. The first is that Gail Crosby, owner of the adjoining ranch, is just about the most beautiful girl he has ever laid eyes on, and second, that for some mysterious reason a gene of riders are very anxious to get rid of him and get control of his land.

Lee's fight to hold his property and his efforts to win the lovely Gail provide no end of excitement and not a little fun. It is spirited entertainment all the way through.

 The building of today, died without having sufficient money to leave for an earthly memorial, said Dr. C. C. Marshall of Bridgeport, Conn., while at a church conference here. "She wrote thousands of hymns without compensation, such as 'Hosanna the Fellowship,' 'Safe in the Arms of Jesus,' 'Saved by Grace,' 'Draw Me Nearer.'"

"If Fanny Crosby were living today these hymns would net the writer a fortune. We who reverence her memory, have a two-fold purpose in erecting a memorial. One is a home for aged in memory of Fanny Crosby at Bridgeport; the second to keep her name in memory by observing a Fanny Crosby birthday."
