Wives Strike In Russian Village

OREL, Russia, Mar. 27. (AP)—A strike of wives in the village of Verveyevka province of Brianst, has resulted in a complete victory, the husbands signing a pledge to accord them better treatment.

Assembling with a militant peasant house wife, Asenya Karasova, as their leader, the women marched to the village school where they drew up their ultimatum. Then Madame Karasova made a speech in which she declared:

"We married women live under harsh conditions. The men often beat us, treating us like cattle. We never hear a kind word. We refuse to suffer these affronts any longer. Therefore we serve our husbands with an ultimatum that we are ready to be helpmates and companions but we demand that our husbands should not be so free with their hands or abuse us with foul words. We shall not return to them until they all sign this."

Realizing that the entire village was against them, the husbands agreed to amend their ways, walking solemnly to the platform and with the trembling hands signed the document.

They were laid for Misses Irma and Winona Lyman, Mrs. John Stoddard, Mrs. Harry Snodgrass, Miss Marie Couture, Mrs. L. H. Russell, Mrs. Frank Cleavinger, Mrs. F. E. Rohan, Miss Melba Hank, Miss Thelma Kitcher, Mrs. Raymond Hager, Mrs. Percy Serogin, Miss Bethel Newell, Mrs. Verda Rae Smith, Mrs. J. H. Black, Mrs. Lester Stoddard, Miss Lucille Black, Mrs. Neat Suddam, Miss Betty Garrick, Mrs. Audieer, Playes, Mrs. Elmer McManus, Miss Black and Mrs. Larson.

and the plant you don't see
Here's a curious reversal of nature. Bulbs in plain view, but the plant out of sight—and nearly always out of mind.
You can light your bulbs only because there is an "electric" plant behind them—miles of transmission and distribution lines which connect your place with the generating stations; an equipment of waterwheels and boilers furnishing power for the generators, and men on the job night and day to keep that equipment in good operating order.
The electric plant, like every other plant, needs nourishment—what it needs most and thrives on best is your good will.
