That trip to New York, who becomes involved in a wild plot when he leaves the placid surroundings of his ranch and starts in to play the gallant, eager and ready to leap in and fight when a fair maiden is in distress.

There is ample opportunity, it is said, for display of the Dempsey prowess in the entertaining story and Jack meets a score of villains in a big fight scene that is said to carry all the realism that could be desired. Miss Taylor, it is promised, has a pleasing role in the part of the girl who intrigues the interest of the big ranchman and who has the honor of seeing him whip a whole regiment before he finally carries her bodily to the Little Church Around the Corner.

The mysterious mansion where Jack finds himself entirely surrounded by enemies is said to be one of the most novel settings ever used in a picture. It is alive with trap doors, sliding walls and disappearing hiding places, and much comedy is promised in the antics of two wild and woolly friends of the hero who accompany him on the pilgrimage and are self-appointed bodyguards. A good cast, including Frank Campeau, Bull Montana and George Stuggan, support the famous star.

SPICY EVENINGS IN THE GARDEN

The garden filling the evening air with spicy fragrance makes a double appeal to the senses. A very handsome annual admirably adapted for bedding and producing a wealth of flowers for the house which gives off a rich fragrance, particularly in the evening is the ten-week stock.

Stock and aster for many years were standards in every garden. The aster has gained in popularity and is now indispensable for the housewife and fall garden, while the equally valuable stock, which has a much longer season of bloom has lost favor. The chief reason is that while the aster is easy to grow and sure to give a fine crop of bloom unless a flight of beetles or one of the new fungus attacks it, the stock often does not prove a success and will not bloom.

We now know that this bloomless condition is due to a lack of lime in the soil. When the stock holds over the winter and vigorous foliage but no blossoms, lime is being demanded by the plant. Spade the ground thoroughly and when the stocks are set out give a good coating of hydrated lime and rake it into the topsoil. A sufficient quantity to whiten the soil like a light snowfall will do the trick. Give another dressing in a month or six weeks and the stocks will do their duty.

The dwarf German ten-week stock is the cut and come again variety. The last named is the latest to bloom and the first to cut. The cut and come again are in-between. It is always best to grow some reserve plants for a small percentage are bound to die singly and when the singles are they can be removed from the bed and double plants substituted from the reserve garden.

Do not be deterred by past failures with the stocks. Lime the ground and they will respond nobly. They, like several other members of their family, the crucifers, have a spicy fragrance which is strongest at night. A close relative, the night-blooming stock, will scent up the evening from a small group of plants. It is insignificant and weedy in appearance but at night it is a delightful plant.

Judging by the past the strings in spring shoes will not last as long as the shoes.

Do your June marrying early and avoid the rush.

"Grass," Coming To Arcade, Attracts Editorial Comment

"Dangerous Flirt" Showing at Sherrys Today Only

It is not often that motion picture evokes editorial comment from a newspaper. "Grass," the Paramount picture which comes to the Arcade theater Wednesday only, during its trial showing in New York, proved an exception to the rule.

Said the New York World, "To the person who has sourly concluded that art and movies are two things and never the twain shall meet, the new picture 'Grass' will come as a surprise. It completely revolutionizes all ideas as to what can be done and what cannot be done with the camera. It tends to begeth with a theme which is possibly the most dramatic theme in theme that cannot be adequately presented in literature, drama or any of the orthodox arts—the struggle of man against nature for existence. Avoiding the pitfalls of traditional movie treatment the producers have managed to extract the maximum of effect that is in it. 'Correctly' judging that this struggle is too grim a thing for what is called 'romance,' they have left romance out. There are no lovers going hand in hand into the wide open spaces where men are men and the handclasp is stronger. There are no lovers at all. There are no lingering embraces, no carefully posed close-ups. But there is human drama of the simplest, most moving sort. There are awit and labor and patient courage, and in some subtle way a suggestion of the primal war, and a grunting that inhales in this fight of man for his bare existence."

A straw hat is a round object which you put in a chair and somebody sits on the darn thing.
