Fred Thompson's Latest Starts Run at Sherrys

A famous rodeo, the Alturas Round-up, is an integral part of Fred Thompson's latest, "All Around Prying Pan," at Sherrys today. Really the picture is two shows in one: for the show of this cowboy classic are a show in themselves, and they are only an important incident in the picture.

Another thing that distinguishes "All Around Prying Pan" is the fact that Thompson's great horse, Silver King, appears as an outlaw Silver and Fred were actual contestants at Alturas when they shot the scenes for this F. B. O. release, and they certainly run away with the honors among a group of the world's best riders.

A strong story with a distinctly melodrama flavor has been provided for the star by Frank Harrison Pierce and David Kirkland; the former the author of the original magazine tale and the latter the adapter as well as the director. Working the Alturas Round-up into the story was a happy thought; and it fits into the action like a well planned plot.

Director Kirkland has handled his skill characters and situations with skill that amounts to real genius. Mr. Thompson has never been better directed, and Silver has an even more important role than usual. Lovely Clara Horton takes the role of Jean Dawson, playing opposite the star, and proves as able as she is attractive. The remaining important roles are filled very capably by Jim Marcus, William Courtwright, John Lane, Monte Collins, Elmo Lincoln and Newton Barber.

Nobody But Hoot Could Ride Horse Used in Film

When Hoot Gibson, star of "Chip of the Flying U," the present production at the Star theater, told members of the company making the picture that no one else could ride his horse, "Pride of Oregon," they didn't believe him.

A group of the Universal Ranch Riders who appear in the picture, and all of whom are excellent horsemen, scoffed as they saw Hoot on his apparently docile mount, which he has trained for several years.

"Anybody can ride that horse," they told him.

"Nope," said Hoot. "There isn't any one in the world that can ride him except me. I broke him in, and I'm the only one who has ever been in this saddle."

They continued to doubt until he let them try it. "Oregon," calm and obedient when Gibson was mounted, became an unbroken outlaw as far as the others were concerned.

One by one the expert riders climbed into the saddle and were unceremoniously bounced into the dust. "Oregon" showed as much facility at bucking off strangers as he did in obeying the commands of his master.

Blindfolded, he knew immediately when Hoot was in the saddle and when it was a stranger.

"I wish my automobile had the same trait," Hoot observed. "I wouldn't have to bother about locking it when I leave it on the street."

"Chip of the Flying U," Hoot's latest and one of his best productions, is a film version of the well-known novel by B. M. Bower.

An unusually large supporting cast appears with Gibson in the picture, including Virginia Brown

Faire, Philo McCullough, DeWitt Jennings, Harry Todd, Mark Hamilton, Gilbert "Pee Wee" Haines and many others.

The Hoot Gibson feature, and a Gank comedy will be the attraction at the Star theater again Saturday which is the last day.

"Palace of Pleasure" Coming to Arcade Saturday

Tomorrow there comes to the Arcade theater a picture that no film fan should miss. In it Betty Compson does the outstanding performance of her entire career. Edmund Lowe, finds his most satisfactory vehicle and Emmett Flynn accomplishes the best piece of direction with which his name has ever been associated. Think over this trio's record of past achievements and you will realize that this statement is indeed high praise.

The picture that accomplishes the feat of giving them so extraordinary an opportunity, is called, "The Palace of Pleasure," a William Fox production. It will be the feature attraction at the Arcade theater Saturday only. The film is adapted from the stage romance, "Lola Montez" and is an adventure romance told against picturesque and lovely settings of old Portugal during a vital period in its political life.

In Lola Montez the spectator sees the dancer whose beauty left a trail of broken hearts—her suitors comprising political leaders and common soldiers in that age when Lisbon was the site of uprisings and revolutions. The story is devoted to the actress' intrigue with an outlawed royalist and the jealousy of the Premier of Portugal who swore that his rival would never possess the girl whom he himself desired.
