Laughs Galore Promised in Hines Comedy

If your laugh-system hasn't experienced any exercise lately, let yourself quickly to the Arcade and see Johnny Hines in "Rainbow Riley." If that doesn't turn your system into the laughingest place of mechanism, there is probably something wrong with you. "Rainbow Riley" is a rollick from start to finish. It's fast, funny, clever, spontaneous and refreshing.

We must confess candidly to a long-standing liking for the energetic, fast-moving Hines. In "Rainbow Riley," which is an adaptation of "The Club," Johnny goes through his capers like a ramping thoroughbred. His first move is to fall in love with the schoolteacher-sweetheart of this. Meanwhile the killer of the mountains and the leader of the Ripper clan. That means trouble from the start, and Johnny never gets his neck out of the noose until he has to overcome the entire mountain community with the aid of government troops.

He does it to the Queen's taste, and in the accomplishment thereof he goes through a series of escapes that are fraught with danger, laughs, thrills and dynamic action. It isn't the story so much as it is Hines and the brand of clever gag he uses to get out of his precarious situations that makes the film so fine. Always there is the Johnny Hines ingenuity, the Hines rapid-fire action, and the downright button-bursting fun that he promulgates. "Rainbow Riley" is the sort of a story that starts out at a sixty mile a minute clip, keeps up the high voltage throughout the body of the story and winds up with a bang. It is the feature picture at the Arcade today and Saturday.

With two train wrecks, a race between a freight locomotive and a runaway special driven by a crazy man, a leap from one engine cab to another at seventy miles an hour, and a fight in the swaying, lurching cab of the "Special" that will go down in film history, "The Midnight Flyer" deserves its claim to the title of the most spectacular of melodramas. This compelling P. B. O. production is based on two stories by Arthur Guy Empey, and the plethora of sensational material has been knitted into a taut, interest-gripping whole by J. Grubb Alexander, who wrote the adaptation and screen version, "The Midnight Flyer" comes to the Sherry theater for its local premier here today, beginning a two-day engagement. Characterization has by no means been neglected in developing the story, and the quaint, unusual types of Virginia mountaineers, conspiring in their ignorance against the coming of the hated "railroaders" have been beautifully done. Director Tom Forman and his exceptional cast deserve the greatest credit for their fine skill and understanding in making "The Midnight Flyer" what is it—a classic in railroad tales and an excellent human document as well. Featuring Cullen Lonis

"The Timber Wolf" At Star Is Buck Jones Picture

and Dorothy Devore. Comedy showing "Fire Away."

"The Timber Wolf," starring Buck Jones, opened last night at the Star theater, in the sort of motion picture that has made Buck popular with thousands of fans. It is a western story, adapted from Jackson Gregory's novel, which embodies all the two-timed romance of the old west, giving Buck the opportunity to fight, ride and woo to the queen's taste.

Wisconsin Editor "Pete" in Jones' leading role and she does some dramatic work that is worthy of her selection as a Baby Star of 1924. Dave Ryan as Devore, the heavy; Will Walling as Sheriff Taggart and Kate Allen in the character role of Joe Terry, also deserve special mention.

"The Timber Wolf" is a story of the lumber and gold country, Jones as Bruce Standing, is a big lumber owner and Joe Terry, one of his men, discovers a valuable gold vein near the property.

Devore and Sheriff Taggart attempt to force him to tell the location of the mine. Rene Brooks, Devore's fiancée, arrives from the east and Bruce incurs her animosity. Bruce tries to tell her that Devore is a crook, and when she refuses to listen to him, he kidnaps her to prevent her from marrying the scoundrel. Bruce is wounded by Rene and in his delirium he reveals his story for her. Rene, still unconvinced that Devore is bad, takes a plan of Terry's mine from Bruce's pocket, and flies to her fiancée. What she does catches her that Bruce was right.

"The Timber Wolf" and a two reel comedy will be shown at the Star theater today and Saturday.
