Old-Time Seamen Write in Praise of Sea Picture

Since the release of the spectacular Columbia production, "S-O-S Perils of the Sea," letters have been pouring in from seamen who have seen the film and have a great deal to say about it. This feature, starring Blaine Hammelstein, was made with the idea of reproducing faithfully the spirit of both the sea and the men who live upon it. The praise it has received is best qualified to judge seems to indicate complete success.

"I felt myself walking on the deck of my old fishing smack," wrote one old tar to Director James P. Hogan. "When I saw this William Francy mending nets on the fore-deck I could almost smell the salt and hear the grind of the boom as it swung on its lashings. Thanks for a great thrill for an old man and please make another sea picture soon."

Another letter spoke of the fine characterization of the incidental figures in the picture. "I have seen many a hard-bitten skipper in my day, and Pat Harrison who plays that part in your picture must have copied from life. Absolutely brutal, careless of any ideas of mercy, he is the very image of the type that has fortunately disappeared from the seven seas. Congratulations also on the characters of the cook and the mate, William Francy. Your picture made me darn homesick for a life that is over for me—but it was a treat I won't forget soon."

"Skinner" Makes 'Em Howl with Mirth At The Arcade

Reginald Denny has earned the right to be crowned King of Comedy. This amazing young actor conveys more with the lift of an inquiring eyebrow than many others can with their entire bodies.

Denny's flair for farce is not better exemplified than in his latest starring vehicle, the new Universal-Jewel, "Skinner's Dress Suit," playing at the Arcade theater today and Saturday.

"Skinner's Dress Suit" is a rib-tickling tale of a young married couple, the Skinners, who live in the suburbs. They are just the sort of married children who live next door to you and me. Very much in love with one another, with "Honey" under the positive belief that her husband is the greatest business man of all time.

fully directed by William A. Selter. Denny, as the star, is perfect. His facial expressions and intelligence with which he assumes this role, which is so unlike the real Denny, make it one of the season's outstanding performances.

"Too much credit cannot be given to charming Laura LaPlante, than whom he can think of no one better able to portray "Honey," the cuddly and ambition-for-her-husband wife.

Ben Hendricks Jr., and E. J. Ratcliffe make real bosses while Hedda Hopper, as the wealthy society woman, gives a characterization as to the manner born. Space does not permit detailed comment but suffice to say that the rest of the players are perfectly cast.

They include Arthur Lake, Lionel Braham, Betty Morrissey, Henry A. Barrow, Broderick O'Parrell, Lucille Ward, Lucille De Nevers and Frona Hale.

PEANUTS AND ENERGY
PRINCETON, N. J.—It seems as if purchase of a bag of peanuts for his stenographer ought to help a busy man get through his correspondence. Professor Andrew Hunter has figured out that there is enough heat in one peanut to provide energy for the typewriting of 4000 words.
