La Grande Theatres

Vaudeville Bill
For Sunday Announced
By Arcade

Vaudeville oddities comprising comedy, gymnastics, musical and humorous revues will entertain the pleasure-seeking populace at the Arcade theater on Sunday.

The International Trio in presenting their present vehicle, "Mirth, Melody & Music," run the gamut from opera to tunes that satisfy the less ambitious musical fan. Fay and Welch present "Smiles, Sucklers and Songs." The Three Harmony Girls in "Youth, Talent and Beauty" have sweet singing voices that blend harmoniously. Dew and Stone proffer "Syncopeation," a song cycle of blues as well as some musical gems.

Associated Exhibitors are the promoters of Miss Joyce's first picture, and have spared no expense in bringing every detail of the production up to the level of Miss Joyce's finished performance.

Marshall Nellan was secured to handle the direction, Owen Moore and Earle Williams selected for the leading male parts, and an all-star cast employed to furnish a colorful background. The sets and costumes are lavish, with one elaborate masterpiece the cost of which ran into thousands.

This picture comes to the Star theater Sunday and Monday, heralded as one of the greatest productions of the season. Be that as it may, it stands to reason that it must be one of the most interesting, for the story and the star are far above the commonplace.

The preview notices of the Colortone, the rare friendships and umbra sea drama, S-O-S Perils of the Sea, praise the brilliant effects obtained with the coloring of the flames when the huge ship crashes, stands on end and plunges to the bottom.

The chances are that when an audience sees any such exceptionally fine piece of work it comes from the hand of Arnold Hansen, the famous European artist who has done many other Columbia features.

Mr. Hansen has a reputation in the industry which is due not only to his craftsmanship but to his scientific contributions to film coloring. There is little doubt that some time, not very far in the future, the motion picture will be all colored. Mr. Hansen has done much to help advance this date.

He has perfected an entirely new and original method of "hand painting" each scene in a picture that may be colored without giving the effect of a colored postcard suddenly slid into the projection machine, as the apparatus throwing the image on the screen is called.

In "S-O-S Perils of the Sea" the artists had a fine opportunity to display their talents. It contains a series of thrilling sea spectacles. Elaine Hammerstein is the star and a well-known cost of popular favorites support her. It is headed by Robert Ellis.

Rare Totems Seen
In Alaskan Film,
"Rocking Moon"

As the American has his Eagle, the British his Lion and the Russian his Bear, so the Alaskan Indian has his crest animal, each clan represented by a different creature. What the coat of arms is to the English aristocracy, so are the totemic marks to native families. They are of three kinds, the totem placed above the grave, the history totem, and the genealogical totem, found before the dividing of the nation.

Totems are not subjects of worship, as so many think—they are merely picture writing in wood, cryptic records of the Indian past, hereditary and historical records carved in wood by a picturesque brown people who will soon be gone from the face of the earth.

The white man has educated the Indian of to-day until he is scornful of the totem art of his forefathers. Yet even the most sophisticated must pay tribute to the wild and positive art of the totem carver, when he comes suddenly upon one of these columns.

Against the green of the forest they stand out vividly turquoise, red, white and black, their carved faces looking with white lonely eyes to the sea. There is a mystic hush about them. Silent imperturbable, weirdly serene, they are yet pregnant with tales of native peoples, the Thingata, the Haidas, the Tsimshians.

"Rocking Moon" is booked to show at Sherrys, Sunday and Monday. Many totem poles are seen in the picture and while the story does not center around totem poles or totem lore—they are necessary to the picture, which was filmed in Alaska by Director George McLeod.

the many enemies are all known to her and set forth vividly in her masterpiece.

This book has just been translated to the screen, with the avowedly most fascinating woman of the country, namely, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, in the featured role.

This is Miss Joyce's first screen vehicle, and she is making her debut in the film world with much blowing of trumpets and clashing of cymbals, not only because she is the possessor of a rare and unique charm and has a thousand admirers who have worshipped her upon the Broadway musical comedy stage and in private life, but because she has proven herself to be an actress of genuine and surprising ability, according to all who have seen the picture.

Associated Exhibitors are the promoters of Miss Joyce's first picture, and have spared no expense in bringing every detail of the production up to the level of Miss Joyce's finished performance.
