La Grande Theatres

"The Iron Horse" Hailed as Great Picture

Numerous histories of the building of the new west, telling of the first continental railroad, record colorful incidents of that achievement which have been faithfully re-enacted for the screen in the William Fox special "The Iron Horse." As an instance, there is a detailed record in "New Colorado," by Hayes, of an attempt by Indians to lasso a train. The incident is shown in the picture as clearly as it occurred.

"The graders and track layers often had to fight their way and there is a tradition current of an attempt to stop an express train," wrote Hayes. "It is understood that a lariat was stretched across the track, breast high and held by some thirty braves on each side. 'But,' says the narrator, 'when the engineer first saw it, he didn't know what on air was the matter; but in a minute more he bust out laughing and he ketched hold of that throttle, and he opened her out; and he struck that lariat again about forty miles an hour, and just piled them braves up everlastingly pernickious, you bet!'"

John Ford, the director, follows actual history in the picture which has been heartily approved by both press and public.

"Wild Bull's Lair" Showing at Sherrys Today

One of the most likable traits of the many-sided Fred Thomson, F. B. O. star in super-Western productions, is his love for Silver King. Silver King is Fred's horse, a gigantic milk-white animal with the softest and most human eyes ever a horse was blessed with. And because Silver King is just such a horse with just such understanding, and because he follows Fred around more like a little spaniel than an awe-inspiring equine, Fred actually loves him.

Well, anybody could love him. And Fred has all the more cause, to because Silver King anticipates his every thought. Fred has but to make a swift motion of the hand and old Silver responds with a quiver of his fine eyes which is a glorious sight to behold.

When, on the strength of the love Fred bears for him, Silver has the best quarters of any animal in Hollywood. His stall is as spotlessly clean as a modern dairy. His food is as carefully selected as a baby's. When Fred rides out on location, Silver travels along in his own special automobile, right near Fred. It is the star's religious duty and pleasure to see that Silver is tucked in for the night. There is something almost touching in the love of a man for a horse. The team of Fred Thomson and Silver King, known the world over, is regarded in Hollywood as the most splendid example of man-and-animal affection.

Comely showing, "Dancing Daddies."

One of the most remarkable pictures ever seen here was presented last night at the Star theater when the Gotham Production "His Master's Voice" was screened. The outstanding feature of the picture is the wonderful acting and the foremost actor is the wonderful police dog "Thunder." Many of our famous film stars could take lessons from this clever animal whose police before the camera is actually astonishing.

The human actors in this picture however are of the very best. The ability of Mary Carr, screenland's famous delineator "mother" roles, is well known and George Hackathorne one of the few leading men on the screen who are also character actors, portrays a very unusual character. Marjorie Daw as the heroine is both capable and sweet. The high lights of the picture are the spectacular battle scenes and the unusual intelligence displayed by "Thunder." To see a dog plunge headlong into a maelstrom of bursting shells and blinding fires to drag a man through fire and water is unusual but to notice the skill with which the animal works his way to the front is a practical demonstration that animals really think.

There are lighter moments that create laughter but they are more breathing spells to enable the spectator to wait for "Thunder's" next stunt. "His Master's Voice" may be safely recommended as one of the most pleasing and worth while picture ever seen here.

"His Master's Voice" and a comedy are the attraction at the Star theater again today and Saturday.
