La Grande Theatres

Romance and Action Featured in "Everlasting Whisper"

One of the most interesting and thrilling pictures in which Tom Mix has ever appeared, "The Everlasting Whisper," opened at the Star theater yesterday for a three-day run.
It shows the western hero in a new light in some of the sequences—that of a tamer of women. He has often shown his capacity to make wild horses do his bidding, but in this picture, he convinces his leading lady, played by Alice Calhoun, that she much prefers the wild of the indomitable male to the attentions of an Easterner.
"This new picture owes much of its charm to the scenery. Locations were chosen which are sublime. Gorgeous vistas of timber are shown and the dazzling snow scenes are sights long to be remembered.
Tom does one of his most breathtaking feats on the edge of a cliff—a flight sufficiently realistic to furnish all the thrills anyone could ask. It is a mystery how these scenes are taken without endangering the lives of the men who take part in them. One pleasant thing about Tom Mix pictures is that nothing is left out to make them realistic. "The Everlasting Whisper" is indeed a worthy effort.
Tom's loyal side partner, Tony, is responsible for many thrills. This horse seems to have an uncanny knowledge of how to conduct himself before the camera. In his fight with the hungry wolves, even a seasoned reviewer felt an uncertainty as to the outcome.
Alice Calhoun is charming as Gloria Gaylor. "This actress has genuine ability as well as charm and it is easy to understand why men are willing to fight, even to the death, for her heart and hand.
Robert Cain plays the villain with a diabolic charm. He is easily one of the screen's best "bad men." Although accustomed to society roles Cain fits into this picture admirably.
The rest of the cast, consisting of George Berrell, Noble Johnson, Virginia Madison and Karl Dane are thoroughly capable players.

"Fool and His Money" Now Showing At Sherrys

Many a film has been spoiled by poor photography or directing and thus ruined the effect of a very excellent story. Eric Kenton directed this picture and he got the most out of George Barr McCutcheon's story, "A Fool and His Money," at Sherrys. The seemingly unimportant little bits of business play a very important part in the success of the picture and these are very often entirely up to the director.
William Haines as the young writer is perfect in every way. The character things he has to do may not be done prominently so as to offset the character itself. "Madge Bellamy as the young countess is most appealing pretty and overcomes the shyness of a young man afraid to declare himself. Stuart Holmes is as villainous and as foolish as ever. The Prussian twist that he wears on his nose lends more than an air of verity to his playing. Charles Conklin as the faithful servant of the

"Blind Goddess" Packs Powerful Dramatic Punch

A picture of tense drama, gripping power and emotional depth was disclosed this afternoon when "The Blind Goddess" made its local bow at the Arcade theater. This is Paramount's celluloid version of Arthur Train's famous novel. To the credit of Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton, the adapters, and Victor Fleming, the director, it may be said that the film is a graphic, vital portrayal of Mr. Train's widely read and much discussed story.
Not all the honors, however, belong to the author and director. The cast as a whole and the featured players individually deserve a goodly share of applause for their excellent work. As a matter of fact, the capital performances of Jack Hill, Ernest Torrence, Esther Robinson and Louise Dresser contribute in no small measure to the moving appeal and realistic realism of the production.
The plot as it unfolds on the screen concerns the romance of a young prosecuting attorney and the daughter of a powerful politician in New York. When the politician is found murdered, and the police arrest the woman last seen with him, the lawyer-lover finds himself torn twist love and duty. His fiancée naturally demands that he prosecute the murderer of her father; his high ideals

"Why, It Ended My Stomach Troubles and Built Me Up to Perfect Health—What More Could a Person Ask?" Says Cheney.

"I tell you, Karnak ended my stomach trouble and built me up to perfect health, so what more could a person ask," declares J. R. B. Cheney, of 4815 E. 79th St., S. E., Portland, Ore.
"For four months my stomach was upset all the time and caused me no little suffering with indigestion," continues Mr. Cheney. "Why, gas would form on my stomach so bad after eating that it kept me heaving and gagging for hours. I'd have heartburn, too, and felt miserable and out of sorts all the time.
"I felt drowsy and sluggish, but when I'd go to bed I couldn't sleep, and I couldn't find anything that seemed to reach my case.
"But, believe me, this Karnak sure is real medicine. Why, I improved right along on every dose until now I'm on my third bottle and my appetite is fine, and my digestion is perfect. And all that heavy, full feeling in the pit of my stomach is gone as well as the gas and heartburn.
"I just sleep now without hardly turning over, and that in itself is remarkable, for I have to sleep during the day when there is so much noise. I tell you, my entire system has been toned up and strengthened until I am like a new man, and you can just have anybody see me about this medicine."
Karnak is sold in La Grande by the L. & L. Drug Co., and all leading druggists.—Adv.
