MARY K. BROWNE IS DEFEATED BY WOMAN CHAMPION

WIMBLEDON, England, June 22. (AP)—Susanne Lenglen eliminated Miss Mary K. Browne, champion of the American Wimbledon cup team, from the women's singles, by a score of 6-2, 6-3, in the Wimbledon tournament today. Miss Browne in taking four more games from the French star than in their final match in the international hard court championships at Paris recently.

Miss Lenglen and Miss Browne received an ovation when they appeared on the court arm in arm. The French star carried three rackets and a heavy coat sweater. She won the racket toss for service.

Miss Lenglen won the first set at 6-2. Miss Lenglen lost the first point, but won the game. Miss Browne's service was ineffective. The French girl took the second and third games with frequent placements. Miss Browne's service improved but Susanne took the fourth, and then won her own service. Both played very ordinary tennis.

GRID PLAYERS ARRESTED

SPORT NEWS

TEX RICKARD PICKS TUNNEY

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—Tex Rickard informed the New York State Athletic commission today that he had selected Gene Tunney to meet Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight championship at Yankee Stadium on September 16 and offered to post $50,000 that the winner would meet Harry Wills Action on Rickard's proposal was deferred by the board.

Rickard told the commission that under no consideration would he promote a Dempsey-Wills fight this year. He said he had made iron clad contracts with Tunney and the champion and already had advanced both fighters money.

If the commission declined to approve the Dempsey-Tunney match as a Yankee Stadium fight, Rickard said he would take the contest elsewhere. This was accepted as indicating that refusal to sanction the match would result in the transfer of the bout to Rickard's Jersey City arena, Boyle thirty Acres.

Rickard served notice on the commission that his decision to promote the Dempsey-Tunney fight was his final word on the subject. He left the building after the interview.

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—The New York State Athletic commission today refused to sanction Tex Rickard's proposal to stage a heavyweight title bout between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney at Yankee Stadium on September 6 by a vote of 3 to 1.

Billy Evans Says:

BASEBALL AND GOLF
Is the golf swing a bad thing for a ball player's batting average? Jimmy Dykes, star third sacker of the Philadelphia Athletics, is more than convinced that it is.

A majority of big league ball players are strong for golf. They get the same thrill from a long tee shot as they do from a double, triple or home run.

Dykes learned the rudiments of golf as a caddy. At one stage in his career it was a question with him whether he would try to become a golf pro or a big league ball player. Baseball won.

HITS BUT 252
During his early years in the big show, Jimmy was inclined to be streaky at the bat. Over that period he kept up his golf play.

Seldom out of the eighties and usually well under that mark, Dykes paid almost as much attention to his golf game as baseball.

Despite the presence of the lively ball, Dykes had a very ordinary batting average in 1925, falling to .252.

That didn't make a hit with Jimmy. Being smart, he set about to determine what had caused his slump.

STAYS OFF LINKS
After much experimenting Dykes decided that a stiff left arm held close to the body, while very necessary in golf, produced bad results in baseball.

Such a manner of holding the left arm curtailed the smoothness of his baseball swing and had a tendency to make him hit under a lot of balls, pop flies often resulting.

Dykes decided that while golf was no handicap to a batting average when played during the winter months, it certainly caused a shrinkage when indulged in during the baseball season.

He decided to give up golf and become a .300 hitter, a mark he had never reached during his major league career.

JUMPS 73 POINTS
That was at the start of the 1924 campaign. Dykes religiously adhered to his decision to ban golf during the summer. At the close of the season his batting average was .312. He had reached his goal.

Last season, golf was again taboo with Dykes and he jumped his mark to .325. This year he has been in the .300 class since the season opened.

That is why Dykes, one of the best golfers in the majors, is convinced that it is a handicap to a baseball batting average when played during the summer.

USE OWN STYLE
There are other star big leaguers who do mix golf and baseball during the summer and still manage to hold their place in the select circles of the game's best hitters.

Many of these players use a style very much their own, common to ball players. Rather than conforming to the set ideas of golf, that the left arm should be held stiff and close to the body, they take a cut at the golf ball with a more or less typical baseball style.

It is easy to see that players using such a swing, entirely unorthodox, would not suffer as does Dykes, who closely adheres to the best golf form.

AID TO SLUMPS
I know a certain big league star, one of the best hitters in this game, who invariably turns to golf to break the "jinx" when he is in a batting slump.

It may be mere superstition, but he is of the firm opinion that relaxation at golf, a change in style, always brings him out of a batting slump.

Regardless of whether the golf swing actually handicaps a batter, due to the radical difference between the two styles, big league managers are convinced that golf is not a good baseball tonic during the summer months.

Their theory is that 9 or 18 holes in the morning takes much out of a player for the afternoon's work and incidentally take their minds off their livelihood, baseball.

All that's best in a cigarette

AFTER glorious exercise nothing is so refreshing as the fragrant smoke of a Camel. Wherever Camels go—to the seashore, to the mountains, to the office—they bring pleasure, full smoking enjoyment.

No other cigarette made ever gladdened the taste of so many millions, for Camels are made of the choicest tobaccos grown. Camel blending can be found nowhere else at any price. Camels never tire the taste, never leave a cigaretty after-taste.

Camel leadership over all other cigarettes shows that the smokers of America want smoking quality. Camel success is built up on goodness, by the world's largest tobacco organization. Each year the makers of Camels spend millions for quality, and not one cent for frills or fancy wrappings.

No two ways about it, Camels are the finest pleasure, the richest contentment that ever came from a cigarette. If you haven't yet found the utmost in cigarette goodness, answer the most popular smoke invitation ever sounded—Have a Camel!
