Horse Kick Breaks Wrist
WALOWA, Ore., July 1. (Special)—Willard Bell suffered a broken wrist a week ago Saturday when he was kicked by a horse. He had purchased the animal at a sale then saddled and ridden it, and had got off and was holding the halter rope, when it jumped forward and kicked him.

QUAKE IS REGISTERED
BAKERSFIELD, Cal., July 1. (AP)—A slight earthquake was felt here at 5:35 o'clock yesterday morning, according to reports at the office of the Californian.
The shock lasted for a few seconds only but it was of sufficient strength to tinkle ice in water glasses. No damage was done.

La Grande Theatres

Audience to Get Thrills in "Still Alarm"
There is a touch of romance and a thrill in "The Still Alarm", the Universal-Jewel production, now showing at the Star Theater for a three day run, that will set the blood tingling through the veins of the most blasphemous fan or theater-goer. It is a combination of the dash and hardihood of the fire-fighter of yesterday and today, the majestic elegance of a smart modiste shop, the tragedy of a ruined home and touches of splendid comedy. As an example of the technique of direction Edward Laemmle, who supervised the making of this epic of the fire department, has given other directors something to shoot at.
"The Still Alarm" is a modernized screen version of the famous old melodrama of the same name that for years thrilled millions of theater patrons. In it Universal has linked the fire-fighter of other days with his successor of today. Onto the screen dash the picturesque horse-drawn apparatus of the past years, comes the powerful motorized apparatus of today. Bells clang, sirens shriek; an old-time tenement house goes up in flames and a modern one falls prey to fire. These fire scenes, with their clouds of smoke and to MacLean.

Matters come to a head when MacLean gives the girl's father a headache powder that turns out to be poison. When he discovers the mistake, the girl and her father have already started on a motor-trip. Still burdened with the baby, MacLean starts in pursuit—the beginning of what is probably the wildest, dizziest and funniest chase ever put on the screen.

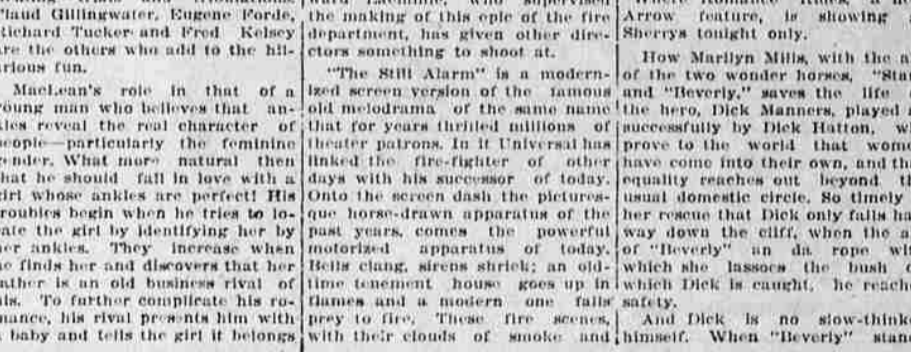

William Beaudine, who jumped into directorial prominence with Mary Pickford's production of "Little Annie Rooney", wielded the megaphone on the MacLean vehicle, and is said to have turned out a picture that has as many laughs and thrills as a porcupine has quills. Joseph Franklin, Poland attended to the adaptation.
The supporting cast is not the least of the production's attractions. Margaret Morris is the lovely heroine, whose ankle is responsible for many of MacLean's rib-tickling trials and tribulations. Claud Gillingwater, Eugene Forde, Richard Tucker and Fred Kelsey are the others who add to the hilarious fun.

MacLean's role in that of a young man who believes that ankles reveal the real character of people—particularly the feminine gender. What more natural then that he should fall in love with a girl whose ankles are perfect! His troubles begin when he tries to locate the girl by identifying her by her ankles. They increase when he finds her and discovers that her father is an old business rival of his. To further complicate his romance, his rival presents him with a baby and tells the girl it belongs

Full of tense exciting moments, with wild riding and stunts that make one hold one's breath, "Where Romance Hides," a new Arrow feature, is showing at Sherrys tonight only.
How Marilyn Mills, with the aid of the two wonder horses, "Star" and "Beverly," saves the life of the hero, Dick Manners, played so successfully by Dick Hutton, will prove to the world that women have come into their own, and that equality reaches out beyond the usual domestic circle. So timely is her rescue that Dick only falls half way down the cliff, when the aid of "Beverly" an da rope with which she lassoes the bush on which Dick is caught, he reaches safety.
And Dick is no slow-thinker himself. When "Beverly" stands
