

SEEKS BOOZE; FINDS SKUNKS

ENTERPRISE, Ore., July 2.—The time was late evening a few weeks ago and the scene was Enterprise's beautiful city park. Two officers were parked there having had a "hunch" that there might be dirty work in the liquor line brewing that they should investigate. The day had been strenuous and one of the men was reclining on the turf doing, according to the Record-Chief, "nothing."

All of a sudden a gentle "pitty pat" came to his ears instantly he was all attention. Perhaps there was some work to do. Eagerly he peered thru the gathering dusk to see what might be coming down the trail. A very small, striped animal appeared and walked sedately towards him. Horror! It was a skunk!

The first officer hastily grabbed a handful of pine cones and hurled them towards the advancing animal which as hastily turned and started in the other direction straight toward the second officer. "Wow!" The second man made 100 yards in nothing flat in the meantime using unprintable language in his disgust.

All became quiet again until presently there was the sound of a lot of scuffling and shuffling about a short way off. The two officers started to investigate and discovered a whole family of skunks playing in a cleared spot a few yards away. No booze was found but the officers departed from the spot with a wholesome respect for the little striped animals.

HEALTH

Fourth of July, lockjaw and death!

How often the three occur in the same sentence in the newspapers describing a sad aftermath of this early summer celebration. Not only is it sad for a person to die of lockjaw, but it is sad to realize that death could have been prevented had a physician been consulted in time.

Despite the campaign for a sane and safe Fourth, the holiday brings in its train accidental gun shot wounds and wounds caused by the explosions of cannon crackers which someone supposed had gone out.

So beware on the Fourth of July! Beware that you do not injure yourself or your neighbor. And, if the unexpected does happen, as often it does on the Fourth of July, take no chances with this horrible way of passing over the great divide. Report immediately to your family doctor for the anti-tetanic serum, or "shots" which will prevent the occurrence of lockjaw.

The germ of lockjaw, known as tetanus bacilli, are found in the soil, most everywhere. That's why it is so easy for these germs to enter your body should it be torn by a violent explosion. People whose duties require presence in the country most of the time, are susceptible to the disease after injury because the germs are so widely distributed. This is true especially of farmers, who like soldiers in front line trenches, are confronted with the chance of acquiring the disease easily.

But scientific medicine has found a means of protecting you from death by lockjaw. It has produced a serum which counteracts the poison, which the tetanus germs caused to be produced within the body. Twisting of the muscles may be the nearest approach to lockjaw upon administration of the protective serum.

Otherwise there would be, in the beginning, cramps in the muscles of the neck and difficulty in moving the jaws in eating or talking. The condition would increase and spasms follow. Then death, a welcome relief.

Anti-tetanic serum prevents lockjaw, but nevertheless the best preventive is to avoid accidents during the coming holiday. Should one occur and the flesh be badly lacerated insist that the proper dosage of serum be administered.
