YESTERDAY'S GAMES

AMERICAN LEAGUE

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Athletics took both games of Monday's holiday bill with the league-leading Yankees, winning the morning contest, 2 to 1, and the afternoon engagement, 6 to 5. Grove fanned 12 and allowed but four hits in the morning affair and went to the rescue in the seventh inning of the afternoon game to hold the Yanks in check.

Billy Evans Says:

FORM IN SPORTS

In all sports, form plays a most important part.

There is a set way to do everything and that method is generally looked upon as the best.

In golf there is the correct stance, the proper grip, the follow through and a number of other mannerisms regarded as necessary to get distance and accuracy to one's shots.

The same holds good for baseball. A majority of players have a decidedly similar style at the bat. The feet are just so far apart, the distance from the plate is invariably the same, the bat is held at about the same spot and it is considered most essential to step into every pitch rather than pull away.

A RARE EXCEPTION

It has long been a theory of baseball that no batsman could achieve greatness who failed to step into the ball as he started his swing. To pull away from the plate was a fatal fault.

Then along came Al Simmons of the Philadelphia Athletics. He proved to be one of the few exceptions.

Simmons has a very unorthodox style at the bat. He "pulls" on a great many pitches. This habit early in his major career caused him to be called "Foot-in-the-Bucket" Simmons.

Most any manager other than Connie Mack would probably have started to change his style the next; Senger, Adams and Gooch.

moment he arrived in the training camp.

SAME SIZE BALL. Looking the Athletics over at Montgomery, Ala., the year Simmons joined the A's, I at once expressed surprise at his unusual batting style.

"Do you think he will be able to hit in the majors with that style?" I asked Manager Mack.

"Well he has hit the ball wherever he has played and it's the same size ball up here," was Connie's laconic reply.

"Note the long bat he uses and then watch his position after he 'pulls' and you will observe he isn't as far away from the plate as it seems," he continued.

I did and realized the truth of Mack's wisdom. Simmons is today one of the best batters in the American league, proving that style and stance aren't absolutely necessary.

KEEPS FEET TOGETHER

Others in the majors rated good batters who don't follow the traditional lines are Joe Harris of Washington, Earl Combs of the Yankees and George Burns of Cleveland.

Harris has very unusual crouch that makes him appear almost stooped. Combs has a crouch style somewhat after the manner of Harris, while George Burns keeps both feet close together and doesn't step into the ball until it is almost on him.

Helmie Groh, former Giant star, had a peculiar stance, too. Groh directly faced the pitcher while at bat.

All these players are rated dangerous batsmen, so form, while essential, is not an absolute necessity for base-hit success.

Mack's Aide

Here's "Kid" Gleason, Connie Mack's right-hand man in the piloting of the Philadelphia Athletics this season. The "Kid" has been given much credit for the success of the team in general and "Lefty" Grove in particular. You'll recall the "Kid" as a former major league star and one-time manager of the Chicago White Sox.

There never was a smoke so pleasing as Camel

IN LIFE'S supreme moments no cigarette can compare with Camel. No other cigarette ever was made so good, for Camel excellence is the result of skill. Skill in finding the world's choicest tobaccos—in blending, as only the world's largest organization of experts can.

From the beginning Camel took its stand on the quality platform, and nothing could ever induce its makers to change Camel tobaccos. No expense is spared, no care is too great to make Camel the world's most satisfying smoke, regardless of price.

In popularity with smokers, no cigarette made can touch Camels.

Camel quality has been rewarded with the greatest demand, the largest sales any cigarette ever enjoyed. Since smoking began, there was never such a growing preference as for Camels. Camel rewards its friends with enjoyment that never ends, for Camels never tire the taste, simply never leave a cigarette after-taste.

If you have never tried Camels, if you do not know how good, how satisfying a cigarette can be, we invite you to try them now for the utmost in smoking pleasure. Have the best that's made—we invite you—

Have a Camel!
