DECORATING OF HOME IS EXPLAINED

Bernard Jakway Is on 'Homemakers' Program Twice Today

COLOR PRACTICES IS MORNING TOPIC

Miss Cooley and Mrs. McClean Devote Time to Dressmaking and Luncheon Hints.

That the one-piece dress is a creation of subtle complexities and that its decoration is a more dependent on rules than on artistic temperament was gathered among other enlightening impressions by the women who attended the third session of the Observer's free homemakers' institute at the high school auditorium this morning.

A demonstration in home decorating this afternoon, when Mrs. Beth Bailey McClean will have finished her lesson on the cooking and serving of a family luncheon, Mr. Jakway will appear again to give some highly practical suggestions on "Spending Wisely for Furniture."

Success in home decoration, the artist declared and reiterated, has no relation to the amount of money expended. One may get any effect she desires by setting on an idea and then following the rules to attain it. Dignity, blitheness, serenity or what he termed "snap"—any emotion is as possible with little money.

WHEAT RIPENING RAPIDLY NOW IN WALLOWA COUNTY

WALLOWA, Ore. (Special)—The warm weather of the past week has brought harvest along some two weeks earlier than usual for this section of the country. Practically all fields of winter wheat have been ripened around getting ready for binders and combine, and some friends have been bound and put into the shock by the time. All fields are ripening rapidly and some combining will probably start within the next ten days. If the warm weather continues the greater part of the first cutting of hay in the valley have been taken care of at this time. Much haying was done before July 4 this year. Many fields have been irrigated since the first crop was taken off and the second crops are coming on nicely. If plenty of water is available for irrigation present prospects are that a heavy second cutting of hay will be secured from many fields of alfalfa.

FOREST FIRES SPREAD TODAY

Hundreds of Blazes Destroy Valuable Timber Throughout the Pacific Northwest.

SEATTLE, July 14 (AP)—While hundreds of forest fires destroyed valuable timber throughout the Pacific northwest, the U. S. weather bureau reported that lowering temperatures and rising humidity were only temporary and predicted an unusually critical fire situation would resume today. At the summit of the Cascade Mountains, in the Rainier national forest of Northwest Washington, 20 blazes swept through virgin timber along a 12 mile path. On Pacific Island in the Straits of Georgia near Bellingham, in Wenatchee, in National, and near Port Angeles, other fires were reported.

Longview, in Southern Washington, advised of serious flames near Ostrander and Morton, in that section. Sixty men left Spokane, Wash., and Missoula, Mont., to combat 15 blazes in the Blackfoot national forest. Between 40 and 50 fresh fires were started by lightning in the Couer d'Alene district.

Heat Cause of Death Of Fingerling Trout

PENDLETON, July 14 (AP).—The hot weather of the past two weeks has wreaked havoc with the fingerling trout in the state fish hatchery at Bingham Springs, according to word received here today. Of one million trout, a half million are reported dead from a parasite caused by the hot weather. The parasite is working on the fins of the fish. It is likely that the hatchery will be moved further up the Umatilla river, where the temperature of the water is 10 degrees colder than the present location. The water has been 70 degrees during the heat spell. Trout in the Umatilla river have been affected also, and dead ones from fingerlings to some a foot long, have been found along the shores. Fate of 500,000 fingerlings recently released is also causing much concern to officials. About 250,000 trout are being cured for at the hatchery in pools fed by springs at a temperature of 58 degrees.
