the vitamins found in cod liver oil with the valuable addition of assimilable phosphorus. His own research confirmed by that of scientists at Johns Hopkins, Dr. Moore is now endeavoring to interest manufacturers on the coast to place the product on the market, and expects that it will be purchasable in Oregon within a short time.

Known in Europe

Dr. Moore's research at the University of Oregon medical school has won him renown throughout America and even in Europe. He supplements his work there with two baby clinics at Portland, a private one patronized by parents as far remote as Montana and Utah, and the other a public well-baby clinic for the benefit of children whose parents are unable to pay for medical service.

His earlier experience in pediatrics he gained while in charge of the bureau of the American Red Cross hospital at Milan, Italy, during the war. He conducted a hospital for mothers and babies there, and later directed clinics in Paris for the children of mothers and war refugees.

Examined Children

This afternoon, in his talk on "Shoes and Clothing and Their Effect on Health," the speaker will employ babies for illustrative teaching. His lecture on that yesterday afternoon he supplemented with examinations of a number of La Grande children, suggesting corrective diets for those that needed them. Dr. W. P. McAdory and Dr. R. P. Fandis examined the youngsters for heart, lung and throat defects. Miss Alice H. Marquardt, county nurse, was in charge of the weighing and measuring.

On the morning program with Dr. Moore today was Miss Ruby Geora, home efficiency expert, who devoted her hour to a discussion and recommendation of "Household Budgets."

Family Budgets

Family budgets are important, Miss Geora pointed out because economic and social knowledge of what the housekeeper has to spend eliminates worry and disorder in spending.

"No woman should be compelled to ask her husband for the necessities of the household or for her personal use," asserted the speaker. "It takes money to run a house, buy food, and clothe the members of the family. Some men rediscover the fact every day, and us promptly target it until the next."

Cooperation Urged

"While the allowance plan is a step in advance of the 'do-it-yourself' method, it should be figured out jointly by the husband and wife, else it may prove inefficient for all the household requirements. The key of all is the budget plan, which provides in advance for the spending based on the classified needs of the family. With it goes the account, which is the record of expenses kept according to the type of needs supplied."

Six Divisions

Family needs will in most cases divide themselves logically into six divisions: savings, food, shelter, clothing, operating expenses, and advancement, including education, health, recreation, benevolence, social life and personal allowances. Miss Geora has figured.

"To build a budget, one must have some basis or previous experience upon which to work. The C. A. Taylor suggested budget is as follows: Food, 30 per cent; clothing, 13; shelter, 25; household expenses, 12; education, six; luxuries, four; all other expenses, 10. After you have kept one type, you probably will need to alter it to fit your needs," she suggested.

Miss Geora was scheduled to speak at 2 o'clock this afternoon on "Efficiency Methods in the Household."

Folklore and legends are preserved by certain tribes in Malaya and Sumatra on bamboo sticks. The characters are engraved on the wood while it is green. When the wood becomes dry the inscriptions can be preserved almost indefinitely.

Civilian Head

Dr. Herbert Ault is the new international president of Civilian club, elected at the annual convention in Philadelphia. He lives in Knoxville, Tenn., where he is president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Blackmail?

Mrs. Gertrude Fournough, 24, a blonde, formerly of Broadway and Hollywood, faces charges of attempting to extort $2500 from her employer P. R. Hazard, who recently inherited $25,000,000.

is noble, that it inspires the best that is in us."

Professor Fairbanks' opinion, the world is right now entering upon a renaissance of the love of beauty that has never been surpassed.

"And if there is ever to be realized a brotherhood of men and of nations, I think it will grow out of this love for beauty," he said.

"For beauty has no enemies. What is beautiful in one country, must be beautiful in another."

Oregon's Problems

Oregon has its own peculiar problems of art and architecture, the speaker pointed out. For instance, in her choice of colors, she is influenced by the conflict in her early history between the Spaniards in the south, with their Mohammedan-inherited love of blazing hues, and the English on the north, with their preference for somber and reserved tones.

Again, Oregon has yet no type of architecture that she can call her own. Mr. Fairbanks said, and he substantiated on his observation of yesterday, that the true Oregonian home may evolve from the plan
