Movie Sidelights

(By the Associated Press)
Antiques and rare old furniture used in pictures made by the Tolmache sisters are handled and stored with as much care as are accorded them in the fashionable dealer's store. Much of the furniture used in their productions is purchased from the same firms which supply various American museums with their exhibitions of modern and period furniture.

Interior decorating has taken its place as an important factor in motion pictures. The art director now makes his seasonal tours in search of material for this feature.

ture of scene setting.

Seldom is a large motion picture made until the studio location man has found the site best suited for the scenes required away from the studio. But Frederick Arnold Kummer, a Universal author, has started deliberately to find a location in which he not only can set the home and environment of his characters but in which the company can likewise film the scenes for the picture.

The immediate requirements in Kummer's story are a historic, picturesque southern homestead; a waterfall within easy walking distance; a mill of authentic antecedents and a historic picture gallery of artistic southern ancestors.

Two new members of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer motion picture company once were high officers in the Russian Army in Czarist days.

Counselor Roy Schott now has charge of a troupe of Cosmoes brought here for the production "The Cosmoes," while former Major General Theodore Lusk of the Imperial Russian Guard is technical adviser for the same picture.

A new problem in underwater photography was solved successfully by Director John Ford and his cameraman in filming "The Devil's Mast." It was necessary to have continuous sequence beginning above the water and continuing under the surface while the picture showed characters from the deck of a submarine.

This was accomplished by means of a square box, with an "eye" for camera lens, fastened to the deck of the ship. When the camera motor was started it continued revolving until the craft was far beneath the surface.

Brandon Hurst, who has joined Richard Barthelmess, established himself as a stage actor and playwright before joining the film group.

He first became famous as "Charley" in the London production of "Charley's Aunt," later playing opposite many famous women stars in this country. His writing activities have included twelve one-act plays and a three-act play "The Chinaman," which was produced in London.

AT THE THEATERS

"High and Handsome"
Showing at Sherrys Today and Tomorrow

The iron code, which animates the police department of a great city in time of danger, the ability to skip "High and Handsome" to the last name, breath, the courage of a natural fighter, and the conduct of a man who is naturally a gentleman make "High and Handsome" the latest production starring Betty Flynn, as fine a comedy drama as the most critical audience could ask. It will be shown at the Sherry Theatre for the first time on Monday and Tuesday and those who have seen the production declare it to be the best achievement of this popular star. As officer Harrigan, a modest, courteous, gentle patrolman who will sacrifice even his great love for pretty Marie LeDoux if he thinks it is for her happiness, Mr. Flynn has painted a character who literally lives and breathes on the screen. "Dad's" credit, too, for this outstanding figure should go to Gerald Beaumont who wrote the original magazine story from which the picture was adapted. Two soul-stirring fight scenes, crammed with concentrated drama every foot of the way, are some of the outstanding features of the production, which has been cleverly directed by Harry Garson. Plenty of comedy and a corking supporting cast go far toward making this picture a triumph. Comedy showing "A Fraternity Mix-Up."

Heading the players is Margaret Livingston whose screen portrayals in recent months have been the target of high critical praise. Now in the role of Evelyn Vance, Broadway beauty and gold-digger, she accomplishes a piece of character drawing that is without parallel even in her own consistently fine work in the past.

Harrison Ford, as the Broadway political reformer, is second only to Alvin Livingston in contributing an excellent performance. The heavy portraying the typical gambler and sporting man of the Great White Way—is brought to screen life by Henry Kolker. Wallace McDonald in the role of the young millionaire wastrel completes the list of principals. In the case of

Fox Pictures
Gold-Digging Chorus Girls

"Hell's Four Hundred" is the intriguing title of the new Fox Film Production that is showing today and Tuesday at the Arcade theatre. The picture itself fulfills all the promise held forth by the interesting name the producers have given it. It is a lively, sparkling story of his plot on Broadway and its gold-digging chorus girls.

No doubt you are familiar with the novel by Vaughan Kester from which the picture is adapted. It was published under the name of "The Just and the Unjust" and found a place in the list of the best sellers for several months.

The best summary of the picture is to say that it has retained all the unflattering appeal of the original, while considerably improving upon it in many ways. This improvement is due in no small part to the direction of John Griffith Wray plus the remarkable work of the well known cast.

Morrison to Star
In "Bucking The Truth" at Star

Once more, that ever-popular motion picture star, Pete Morrison, will be seen on the screen of a local theatre.

"Bucking the Truth," Morrison's latest Blue-Stream western production, which was filmed by Lariat Productions for Universal release, comes to the Star theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

It is his latest, and one of his finest productions, and is an excellent explanation of Morrison's steadily increasing popularity as a western star.

Its locale is on the desert in a Western state, and has one of the most original mystery plots ever filmed. It is not, indeed, essentially a western story for its highly intricate and entertainingly wrought plot could be set in almost any locale.

"Bucking the Truth" was directed by Milburn Morante, the well-known director who has made so many successful productions, and is based on an original screen story by Jay Human Kane.

The cast supporting Morrison in the picture includes many well known names, among them being Brinsley Shaw, Bruce Gordon, Ione Reed, Charlet Whitaker, Victor Fox, Oswald Robertson and others.

MANY KILLED, HURT
SACRAMENTO—Persons killed and injured in auto accidents in California during the first six months of the year would make up a small city. A motor vehicle report showed 639 killed and 2,628 injured.
