WOMAN FAILS IN LONG SWIM

DOVER, England, Aug. 2. (AP)—Miss Charlotte Barrett, of New Rochelle, N. Y., failed in her attempt to swim the English channel. She got within two miles of Cape Gris-Nez, France, when she had to be taken out of the water. She was in an exhausted condition.

Miss Barrett started her swim from here Monday morning at 8 o'clock. It was 5:35 o'clock this morning when she was forced to give up the swim that no woman has ever yet made. She was in the water for 21 hours and 35 minutes.

Shortly after she had been taken from the water into the conveying launch Miss Barrett said: "I am very sorry I have failed like this."

During the swim Miss Barrett covered between 30 and 40 miles, being carried hither and thither by the swift tides. Fog caused the pilot boat to lose its bearings.

The conditions had been ideal from the start until the banks of fog, so dreaded by shipping men, came over the scene. Even the experienced pilot was unable properly to guide the swimmer on a direct course.

During the swim Miss Barrett ate a good deal of fruit—bananas, apples and lemons and every half hour she drank plentifully of hot tea.

Union Man Catches 4 20-Inch Bull Trout

UNION, Aug. 2. (AP)—It is not often that the present-day Isaac Walton will return from an angling expedition with arms sore from pulling out the big ones. But that is just what happened to Claude L. Caldwell over the weekend when he accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Bonney and Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Davis of this city on a fishing trip up the Lostine river in Wallowa county.

"Cald" pulled out four 20-inch bull trout "hand runnin'" according to the other members of the party, besides hooking enough others to make up a good share of 15 bull trout that went from 14 to 20 inches each, and on Monday actually admitted his arm was very sore. Altogether those in the party caught 82 of the fish, the total weight of which was 40 pounds. Shaping fishalls like minnows and using this as bait instead of salmon eggs caught the big ones, they report.

First Round Matches Completed in Net Play

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 2. (AP)—Play in the Oregon state tennis championship tournament continued today with matches in the women's singles and men's doubles. Preliminary and first round matches were practically completed yesterday in the men's singles. Catin Wolfard, of San Francisco, defeated Homer Goldblatt, 6-8, 6-1, and Ernest Amburn, 6-6, 6-2.

Homer Griffin, who won the Oregon state title in 1925, attended the matches but is not competing, business interfering.

SUZANNE TO TURN PRO; WILL TOUR UNITED STATES

PARIS, Aug. 2. (AP)—Suzanne Lenglen, the world's champion tennis player, will make a four-month tour of the United States during the coming fall as a professional.

The spectacular girl star at last has given in to the persuasion of Charles Pyle, an American sports promoter, and has agreed to give up her amateur standing and play in matches from Maine to California and also in Canada, Mexico, and Cuba. Mr. Pyle, in announcing that Suzanne had signed a contract with him, said she would sail September 22 and begin playing in the United States some time around October 18. The contests in which she will take part, it is said, are played mainly on covered courts.

In addition to playing tennis Suzanne will be starred in a film picture which Mr. Pyle said will include "A tennis match and will be under my supervision."

The father, owing to illness, will not accompany his daughter. She will be attended by Mme. Lenglen and a maid.

Although Mr. Pyle had declined to give out figures, newspapers estimate that the racket queen's earnings on the tour will be from $100,000 to $200,000.

Wheat Harvest Begins in Fields Near Cove

COVE, Ore., Aug. 2. (Special)—Combines are beginning work in the wheat fields near Cove. The harvest is early because of the continued hot, dry weather.

There is a shortage of water in the mountains, which is bringing the grouse from the mountains. Many of them feed with farmer's chickens.

Lloyd P. Bloodworth, grand dragon of the Texas Ku Klux Klan, has declared his whole-hearted support of the Rev. J. Frank Norris, Post Worth Baptist minister, who recently shot a man to death in his study. Bloodworth is said to be addressing the Klan back of Norris.

Billy Evans Says:

ANEST TOMMY CONNOLLY

Tommy Connolly, dean of the American League staff of umpires, has been calling balls and strikes for well high 30 years. He says he is good for 10 years more.

"Connolly came to the American League in 1901, one year after President Johnson had launched the organization. He has been rounding out his 25th year of service.

When Tommy Connolly walks on the ball field he wears a most serious expression. It is really only a mask for what is underneath, for Connolly has a keen sense of humor and often smiles, all reports to the contrary.

Since joining the American League staff, Connolly has seen hundreds of plunks come and go. As a matter of fact, there isn't an active player still in service who was a member of the organization when Tommy made his debut.

VILAINS DON'T LAUGH

Approve of the belief that Connolly never smiles is an interesting yarn. I happened to listen in on the dialogue.

"Now in baseball the umpire is generally regarded as a very necessary evil. He really is never missed until he fails to show up, making it imperative that the players handle the game.

There is no applause for the umpire no matter how perfectly he may do his work. The crowd tolerates him when his rulings meet with approval, but groans and jeers when his decisions fail to please.

Recently while walking off the field with Connolly after a double-header at Boston, a wise-cracking fan, who apparently didn't like the serious expression that Connolly wears throughout the two games, remarked:

"Don't you ever smile, Connolly?" Whereupon, Connolly looking the fan squarely in the eye and wearing an even more severe expression, replied: "Did you ever see the villain in the play do any laughing?"

The crowd roared and it's no stretch of confidence to say that Connolly chuckled at the discomfiture of the fan over the retort courteous; not, however, until we got under the stand away from the view of the crowd.

LESS INSIDE BALL

Connolly, who has been baseball from every angle from the days of the Baltimore Orioles, marvel team to the present time, doesn't think there is as much inside baseball played today as there was 15 or 20 years back.

He attributes the falling off of the so-called inside stuff to the lively ball, the popular demand for more batting, a decline in pitching and the custom of every batter taking a healthy swing.

Connolly's opinion is that better pitching made for tight baseball. In close games a one or two-run margin means considerable. To attain such a lead, clubs would resort to all forms of strategy in the old days.

Working for one run calls for smart stuff, while getting them in clusters largely results from brute force.

FAVORS UNIFORM PARKS

Connolly doesn't favor the suggestion that the pitching distance be shortened in an effort to increase the effectiveness of "the twirlers."

His old pal, Hank O'Day, dean of the National League staff and once a great pitcher, leans to that viewpoint. Cutting the distance five feet in Hank's opinion would throw the handicap on the batsmen.

One thing Connolly would like to see before he retires from active service, is uniform ball parks. In other words the outfield distance would be the same everywhere, with ample room for the outfielders to cover plenty of ground.

There is nothing more thrilling than a sensational catch in the outfield, yet at many parks such plays are few and far between because of the greatly curtailed outfield space.

Groves of small olive trees in the West region of northwestern India are said to be derived from trees originally propagated from the stones of olives, which were ring away on the line of march by Alexander's army. They are poor in quality, but the natives bury their dead among them, considering them sacred groves.
