Philadelphia Seeking Dempsey-Tunney Fight

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP)—Philadelphia interests today renewed overtures to Tex Rickard to stage the Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney heavyweight title fight in the usual-centennial stadium there, if developments prevent it from being held in New York, according to announcements by the promoter.
 Rickard did not reveal the identity of those approaching him on the subject but declared he understood they had the support of mayor Kendrick of Philadelphia in bidding for the bout.
 The promoter added he would not seriously consider any offer from Philadelphia or elsewhere until convinced that obstacles in the way of the fight could not be overcome.
 To hasten a solution of the licensing issue, which is now the chief barrier to the match here, Dempsey is likely to appear personally before the state athletic commission next Tuesday.

WALTER HAGEN GIVES ADVICE

The Associated Press here with presents one of a series of articles illuminating national sports and their chief figures. It is an interview with Walter Hagen, leading professional golfer of the world, written by Alan J. Gould, sports editor. The interview is copyrighted by the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP)—The duffers in golf who are struggling to "break 100" can make a long stride toward their goal if they will follow the advice of no less an authority than Walter Hagen and "relax."
 The American professional champion declares "relaxation" is the one thing that every golfer should learn, yet many of them, knowing full well the advantage of loose, supple muscles, tighten up and become as stiff as a poker as they are about to hit the ball.

 "This ruins more shots than any other one thing I can mention," says the premier professional.
 "Jack Hutchinson and I met in the finals of the first P. O. A. tournament ever held. Jack set off like a race horse and I tried to gallop along with him. We covered the course in the astonishing time of something like an hour and a half, but where Jack was used to that sort of thing I got into all kinds of trouble, hurried my shots and in the match, that taught me to take it easier and study out the shots and many problems that present themselves through the fairways and on the greens."
 "Another lesson I learned," Hagen went on, "was at Garden City in the P. O. A. war relief tournament, in which I was beaten by Jerry Travers, one of the best amateurs that ever held a golf club. I was two up on him at the ninth and Jerry seemed to be playing ragged golf. His tee shots were uncertain and he was struggling to keep up. I figured I had the match won, but Jerry suddenly came to life and beat me out."
 "It is a bad idea to figure a match won until it is over. The last putt may be the deciding factor. I observed defeat at the hands of both Hutchinson and Travers in the two instances. I have told of but I was able to profit by them both."

Billy Evans Says:

ABOUT AL SIMMONS
 If there is one thing a major league ball player should do it is to run out the ball every time he is at bat.
 I understand that is one of the things that recently caused Connie Mack to suspend Al Simmons, voted by the baseball experts of Philadelphia as the most valuable man on the Athletics last season.
 It is unusual for a player to come to bat more than five times in a game, four is closer to the average, so it is not asking very much of him to run out every hit.
 No club in other major leagues adheres more closely to this theory than Cleveland. Manager Tris Speaker sets the example by going to first at top speed, regardless of where he hits the ball.
 One thing that caused me to admire Outfielder Jameson of Cleveland before he developed into a really great player, was the determined manner in which he set out for first every time he hit the ball.

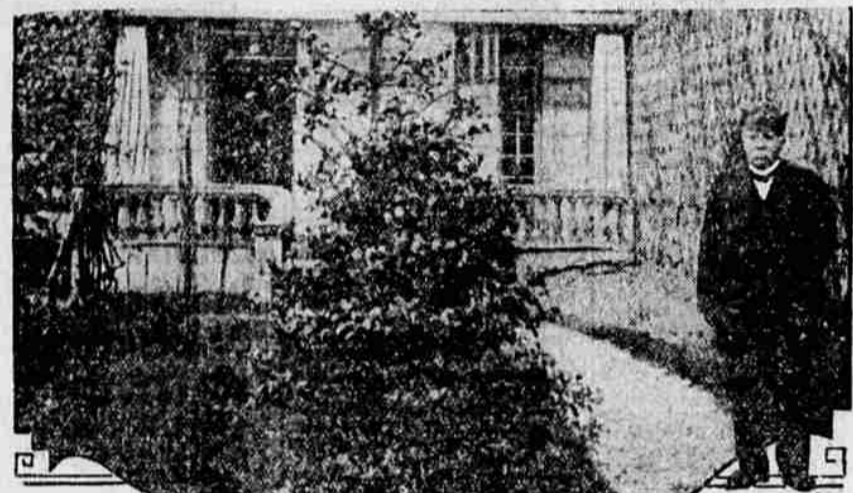

TAKE WORK SERIOUSLY
 It is to be regretted that Manager Mack found it necessary to discipline Al Simmons. Mack is usually very reticent about taking such severe action, so no doubt it was deserved.
 Simmons is a great ball player, but he can wreck his own usefulness as well as a brilliant career unless he takes his baseball seriously.

Walter Hagen, famous golfer, spoke large gobbs of wisdom, when he said no player in any sport could hope for success unless he took his own particular game seriously. He said that as the reason for the Britons' slump in golf last season, Simmons was the big noise of the American League. He finished with a mark of 136, three points away from Tris Speaker who finished second and seven shy of Harry Hellmann lead the league in batting.
 Many experts predicted that Simmons would be the squire leader of 1926.
 Instead, we find Simmons suspended for weak batting and indifferent fielding.
 Perhaps the best moral to his tale is—be serious.

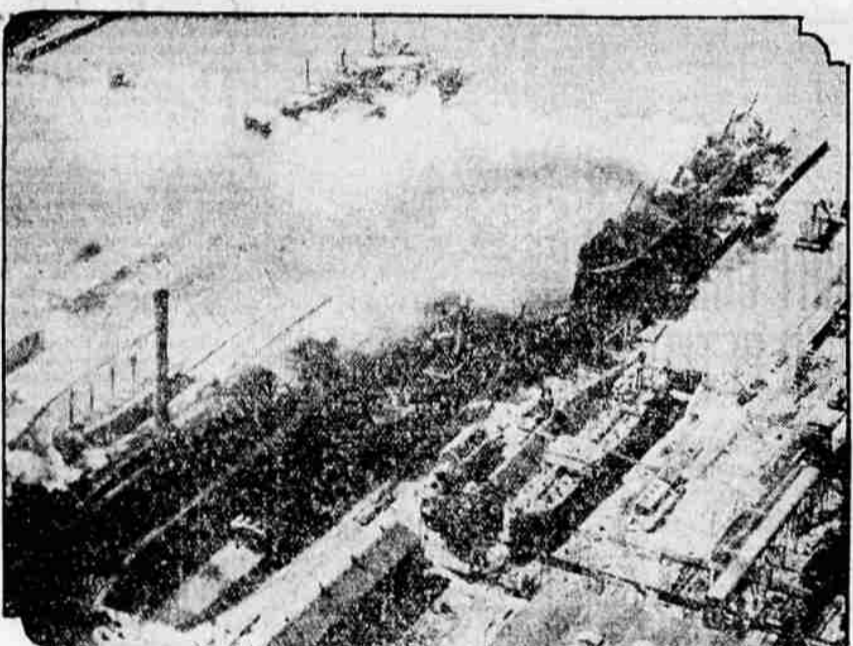

PRO FOOTBALL GROWING
 Professional football is stretching out in directions for popularity.
 Boston is to have a pro football team this year. Boston for years has been a great center for the college grid game. It is the home of Harvard and Boston College, both institutions having thousands of supporters.
 Since Boston for years has been a stronghold for the college game, the professionals may find the going tougher there than in other cities where the pro brand of football has become popular.

STARS TO COACH
 The promoters are taking the innovation seriously and have already engaged Herb Treat and Ralph Gilroy, two former Princeton stars, to coach the team.
 It is planned to recruit the team largely from Boston and vicinity in order to arouse more civic pride in the eleven.
 I am of the opinion that professional football has come to stay. It wouldn't surprise me, if within five years the owners of the various major league baseball franchises got back of the pro game.
 That would put it over big, as proper supervision is all it lacks.

COLOR HELPS HAGEN
 Walter Hagen will always continue to be one of the biggest figures in the golfing world because he is colorful.
 While Hagen failed to win either the British or American open, he was strongly in the running in both events, finishing inside the money.
 Just when the golfing world was paying homage to Bobby Jones for winning the two greatest golfing titles, Hagen decided it was time for him to break into the headlines. Walter well realizes the value of publicity.
 Starting with 67-65—132 for the first two rounds of the eastern open championship, Hagen broke the world record for medal play for 36 holes on a championship 6500-yard course.
 After this record-breaking feat he set out to better Emmet French's mark of 274, a world record for 72-hole medal play.
 A rather ordinary 74 in his third round hurt. He needed a 68 in his final trip to equal the mark, but fell one stroke shy, finishing with a 275.
 Yes! Walter Hagen is a rather colorful figure in golf. He insists on it.
