DECLINE HITS STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 10. (AP).—The stock market was unsettled today by two powerful selling attacks, one at the beginning and the other at the end of the session. General Motors showed an extreme decline of 16 points, dropping 15 1/2 and scores of others broke 4 to 16 points, the closing quotations generally being around the lowest of the day.

The closing was weak. Advances in a handful of stocks including Helmut, United Cigar Stores, Baldwin and Mack trucks in the final hour, were counteracted by another sinking spell in the pivotal issues. Unable to maintain its recovery, General Motors slumped to the day's lowest level, while U. S. Steel sold under 150, more than four points below last night's closing. Total sales approximated 2,200,000 shares.

Wheat closed firm 1/4 to 1/2 cent higher; corn 3/4 to 1/2 up; oats showing 1/2 to 1/4 advance, and provisions unchanged to 1/2 down.

Undergrade Butter Up; Pullet Eggs Drop Cent

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 10. (AP).—Undergrade butter is a fraction higher on the Portland market today with firsts quoted on the local board at 24 1/2 cents. Other grades remain steady and unchanged. Receipts Monday amounted to 12,716 pounds with the local make reported at 12,257 pounds.

Pullet eggs are a cent lower on the daily exchange at 24 cents due to the heavier receipts coming now. Other grades held firm at former prices. Receipts Monday were only 462 cases and the demand is brisk, especially on henery stock.

Poultry receipts along the street are fairly moderate and prices well maintained. Call is brisk, especially on heavy fowls. Light hens are quoted at 16 cents with heavy hens up to 25 to 26 cents. Light broilers generally are held around 19 to 20 cents with colored stock up to 25 cents.

No change is shown in country dressed meats. There is a good call for top grade stuff at 17 cents on veal and 19 to 19 1/2 cents for hogs. An advance of eight cents a gallon in turpentine was put into effect by local paint and varnish houses today. New prices on drums are $1.22 and on five gallon cans $1.35 per gallon.

MONGOLIAN GUNMEN YET AT LARGE

stronger, the toils began to have trouble among themselves. American courts proved a slow and unsatisfactory means of settlement. A killing here and there they found to be more decisively effective.

And so the long war. La Grande, with her 27, Hop Sing, eight Hip Sing, and one Lone Ho Long, rarely changes when the excitement starts. And when the war involves the Ho Longs, Charlie King, long, buffoonish member, seems always the favorite victim.

Doesn't Want to Fight.
 Charlie or King Chong, as his name appears on the court records, has no desire to fight. He is no like fighter. But Tom Sing, Hop Sing, ever where. Mr. only Ho Long. (It sounds like Ho Long) King when Charlie pronounced it. "At this time, I got in fight, I scared from the booth," he cackled in his steep staccato.

Target in 1918.
 Charlie King was the gunmen's target the last time the long war broke out here in 1918. Chong Ben, Li Huang and Wong Woon, said to have been comrades at the Summer hotel, riddled his face again with bullets fired through the window at him as he sat by the stove in a little store in China town the night of August 5. John S. Hodgkin, who was district attorney at that time, prosecuted them, and Judge J. W. Knowles sentenced them to penitentiary; Chong Ben, from one to 10 years; Li Huang and Wong Woon, from six months to 10 years. Cochran & Eberhard and their associates, C. H. Finn, appealed the case to the supreme court, but the circuit court decision was upheld, and Dexter Melroy, deputy sheriff for Lee Warnick, delivered the trio at Salton.

Second Attack.

Another time Charlie was both beaten and gunwounded when Lem Gong is alleged to have assaulted him near the Turner Oliver home, across from the I. D. S. tobacco. That was Feb. 17, 1916. Charlie is a very small man but he left tracks in the snow that only a giant could step under ordinary circumstances. He was hiding behind the wooden fence had run around the lot where the library now stands when the officers came to his rescue. He failed to identify his assailant when the case came to court, and Lem Gong was dispensed. The officers were convinced at the time that Charlie had been intimidated into fleeing the gunman.

But the greatest excitement in the history of La Grande's long wars was the Chinatown battle in front of the post office March 13, 1917.

Mongolian Killed.

A young Mongolian, generally considered by his countrymen to have learned too well the ways of Americans, was shot to death, and a white woman, Mrs. Cella E. George, was struck in the ankle by a stray bullet. Billie Eng, the victim, had been acquitted with Charlie Finn of a charge of assault on Wong Woon Tuck in 1915.

The shooting took place at noon, and a dozen or more citizens were witnesses. But in the pitch of excitement the gunman escaped, running low to the hills Chinatown on the north side of the street, where the Blue Mountain range now stands. They were hurried into a shack on the alley.

Led by Kate Zwickel, the volunteer fireman turned special police and searched every inch of the shack. Two wisened Chinese women chattered their sewing machines and jabbered warnings to the players that the officers knew were secreted somewhere in the building. One of the machines shot on a rug. Finally after hours, the fireman noticed little bright specks on the rug where the bullets had been missed. They jerked it away, and found a trap door. Swelled jumped into the hole, and found the gunman hidden there.

Gunmen Discovered.

Five of them — Chin Berkes, Chin Ping, Chong Bing, Ah Sam and Chin Lou — were convicted and committed to state's prison for life. Later they were included in selling Governor Roy Bittner's wholesale garden. A sixth one, Louis Moon, found in a separate hiding place, was discharged when it appeared that he was hiding on general pretenses and not from the officers. Hodgkin, assisted by the late T. H. Crawford, was again the prosecutor. Judge McGinn, Cochran & Eberhard were counsel for the defense.

A later Chinese murder, Dec. 20, 1920, was first attributed to the long, but was afterward conceded to have developed from an inter-racial love affair.

Chin Mon Bue, alias Chin Bill, and Mrs. Charlie Jones, who was, or at least had been, white, were followed here from Portland by Joe Shaw. He came to kill, it was alleged, but in the brawl was himself the victim. Chin Mon Bue was tried on a first degree murder charge, but convicted of manslaughter. The jury acquitted the woman. Ed Wright was present during attorney. The defense counsel was R. J. Kiffen.

Served Sentence.

Chin Mon Bue went to Salton to serve his one-year sentence. Mrs. Jones, after she had been given the dope-ure, was allowed to go back to Portland, where she claimed to have a Chinese husband. She has since been indicted there as a peddler of narcotics.
