this, he added, American interest was less immediate at Geneva in the land armament questions, although its participation in limitation of naval armaments was more direct.

A INJURED WHEN AUTO OVERTURNS

finally left the highway and turned over. Mrs. Cross, who was driving, was pinned under the car. A group of men, who were in a nearby field, assisted in taking the injured from the car. H. E. Matthews, probably the only eye witness of the accident, brought Mrs. Newman and Harry Cross to the hospital. Mr. Matthews was driving toward the Cross car, which was coming toward La Grande, when the accident occurred. The auto overturned before it reached him.

Locked brakes or some other mechanical difficulty tending toward loss of control may have caused the wreck. It is estimated that the car was going about 20 miles an hour.

Little Della was brought to La Grande later and taken to the hospital to be with the rest of the party, although she was uninjured. When told that her mother was all right, she almost cried with happiness. She said all she could remember was the car going all over the highway and then a crash. Then she remembers crawling from the car. She said she was the first one out. Della was riding in the rear seat with her mother and Harry. "I wish I had never left Idaho, but alone being in the wreck," she said.

A little later she expressed fears that her father, who is in Boise, would be worried and hoped that her cousins would recover quickly. "There goes our big trip to California," she said. "I bet that they'll be disappointed."

an injunction granted by Judge Walverton August 15 forbidding C. T. Smith from landing his nets on ground claimed by Harry Kruckman.

Kruckman's attorney contended that Smith had violated the court's orders on August 14 by operating his nets in front of the forbidden ground in such a way as to prevent Kruckman fishing on grounds he controlled.

Judge Walverton refused to allow the history of the upper Columbia fish war to be injected into the case, and also refused any evidence as to Kruckman's lease of Loonard Island which is in front of the disputed ground.

RAIN CONTINUES
ROSEBURG, Ore., Aug. 18 (AP)—Heavy showers continued here throughout today interspersed with short periods of sunshine. An exceptionally heavy summer rain occurred early this morning, the downpour continuing for about two hours. So far the rain has done no damage to vines and in the event the storm breaks soon and the weather turns off warm there will be no injury caused.

TRAVELING MEN ARE ACCUSED OF ATTACKING GIRL
KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Aug. 18 (AP)—Charged with brutal assault upon a young woman, A. T. Lacey, of San Francisco, and J. W. Dennis, of Portland, traveling men, will be given a hearing Tuesday morning. Neither was able to raise $2000 bond.

They were arrested when peace officers, returning from a meeting of the Southern Oregon Law Enforcement association drove up behind their car, entering crazily along the Ashland-Klamath Falls highway late Tuesday night. The young woman was found in a disheveled condition in the back of the car. In her complaint, she alleges the men took her for a ride and that when she repudiated their advances they forced open her mouth and poured in moonshine. Her name is withheld by authorities because of her youth.

DARWIN RIGHT, SCIENCE SAYS

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 18 (AP)—Charles Darwin was right in his theory as to the origin of species in so far as the intrinsic invariability of plants is concerned in their evolution, the International Congress of Plant Sciences here was informed today.

Professor E. C. Jeffrey, of Harvard university, speaking before the section for morphology on "Evidence from Australia in regard to the Origin of the Species," declared investigations at the university laboratories give evidence that hybridization is largely responsible for the numerous species of plants.

The Darwinian theory that evolution progresses through the capacity of living things to adapt themselves to environment in the course of generations has been under fire in scientific as well as fundamental circles. Mutationists claim that variations occur suddenly and without apparent cause, rather than as a response to environmental conditions.

ALBANY, Ore., Aug. 18 (AP)—Rain which brought relief to Albany and vicinity after 68 days dry weather was causing anxiety to hop growers and prune growers today. Heavy showers all last night and part of today threaten damage to crops if they continue.

that a man who killed out of lust would be unlikely to return to the scene of his crime; that he would be oblivious to passersby while engaged in a slaying and that he would not be likely to attack anyone in a district as populous as that in which Sylvia met her death.

Stern swore that Jack Mullane, a county maintenance man and defense witness, had refused to give him work because he was "on the state's side." Stern testified last week that Gaines confessed the killing to him.

Mrs. Memmer testified that on is reported to be sweeping approximately 6000 acres in the region of Keene, Holyhook canyon, and Twiddy canyon was reported burning fiercely today.

Residents from all parts of the mountain district menaced by the flames have dropped their normal work to battle the fire.
To prevent the possibility of the fire reaching the tuberculosis sanitarium at Stony Brook the fire fighters are building backfires which are well under control. The fire is 45 inmates at the sanitarium, but no fear is felt for their safety.

U. S. SHOWING WORLD WAY TO NEW ERA

world is that the lives of men are more than mere goods and that peace and contentment are more than mere wealth. Of this latter there is such abundance in this country in many quarters that it has become for many of its possessors a cheap and secondary possession.

"Therefore, I look forward to seeing America spread the gospel of this new learning in political economy over the world and so usher in an era of well-being, peace and contentment such as neither the extreme doctrines of the Manchester school on the one side nor those of Karl Marx on the other could possibly bring about."

Earlier in his address, Sir Esme had said that Walter Raleigh was "the first of our great empire builders, as Cecil Rhodes was probably the last." He took issue with the opinions set forth by a bishop, whom he did not name, in an article published recently in the Church School Journal, wherein the bishop stated that "in some ways the life of Cecil Rhodes is one of the most sordid human biographies on record."

Explaining that he did not uphold everything that was done by the first empire builders of any race, Sir Esme nevertheless maintained that the establishment of civilized life as a substitute for uncivilized life was justified. He said he believed Cecil Rhodes' ideal of a dominant British race was "a wholly mistaken one, for it could, if carried to its extreme limits, but bring discord rather than peace, since it was based not on good will among men but rather on that, in my opinion, most fallacious of all modern premises in politics, the general superiority of the Nordic races."
