HEALTH

GOITER
(By Alfred W. Hornbogen, M. D., Marquette, Mich.)
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Among the large districts within our borders where simple goiter is most prevalent, is the region of the Great Lakes.

The incidents of this disease has been brought forcibly to our attention by the examinations of drafted men during the World War, in surveys made not only of children of school age, but also in some instances of the entire civil population of certain localities.

In the districts bordering on Lake Superior, one city showed that 54 per cent of the entire school population was affected. In another, 67 per cent of all pupils in a large high school, and 80 per cent of all girls in a normal college showed some enlargement of the thyroid gland.

In the Lake Erie district, 54 per cent of all girls attending school in one city had goiter. In one district during the draft—9,615 of the young men examined were affected, and 1,299 of them were so weakened by the disease that they were unfit for service.

Goiter is most prevalent between the ages of 12 and 14, although some children are afflicted from birth. The periods of puberty, pregnancy, and the menopause are times when women are most susceptible to this disease.

Hippocrates, the Father of Medicine who lived hundreds of years before Christ; the North American Indians; the natives of Central Africa; as well as the scientific men of Europe, were all convinced that some property in drinking water was the predisposing cause of goiter.

Now it has been demonstrated by the American investigators, Marine and Kimball, that it is due to a lack of iodine in the system.

Our bodily supply of iodine is derived from the air we breathe, the water we drink, and the food we eat. The absence of goiter on the sea coast is due to the fact that salt water is a great reservoir for iodine. Consequently the edible sea fish and plants, as well as the air, supply this essential element of the human system.

Compare with this the lack of iodine in the Great Lakes Basin. In some districts iodine is almost totally lacking in the drinking water, in the soil, and consequently in the vegetables, grains and fish. The treatment of this disease would appear to be very simple, but in the view of the fact that there are several forms of goiter in which the administration of iodine is injurious it is essential that iodine be taken only on the advice of a well qualified physician.

Nothing seems to distort the vision more quickly than trying to look down on those above you.

There is no use to try to joke with a woman. The other day we heard a pretty good conundrum and decided to try it on the wife. "Do you know why I am like a mule?" We asked her when we went home.

"No," she replied promptly. "I know you are, but I don't know why."
