

ELGIN SCHOOLS OPEN ON SEPT. 6

ELGIN, Sept. 3.—The 1926-27 season of the Elgin schools open Monday. The building has been thoroughly cleaned, and new electric wiring and fire escapes have been installed.

The outlook for the school this year is exceedingly bright. The faculty of both high and grades is exceptionally strong. In the high school three former instructors, E. E. McCormick, Rena Cross and Florence Anderson are back again. Horkemper of the Chicago University is the new member of the high school faculty. Mr. Horkemper comes strongly recommended as an instructor and director of athletics. There is but one change in the list of grade teachers. Miss Hansen of the 5th grade being succeeded by Miss Glen Sisk. The other grade teachers are ones who were here last year.

The first day will be given to enrollment, selection of courses and setting text books. Parents have been urged to have their children at school the first day. Football practice will start immediately.

35 ACRE STUBBLE FIELD IS BURNED; ENDANGERS GRAIN

WALLOWA, Ore., Sept. 3. (Special).—The Frank Walker farm in Leap was the scene of a stubble fire of considerable size one day the later part of the week. Fred Rames who has been hauling wheat for Mr. Walker, had just finished loading the last of the wheat sacks being gathered from the field onto his truck when the fire started. It is thought to have started from a match thrown down. The fire spread rapidly through the heavy, dry stubble and burned over about thirty-five acres before it was finally put out. Fortunately a number of neighbors were working in nearby fields and noticed the fire soon after it started, and were on the job fighting the flames quickly.

Temporary Pastures Are Recommended for Sheep

Sheep can be successfully and economically raised with temporary pastures, numerous forage crops being used for such pastures, says the United States department of agriculture. Soil and climatic conditions should determine largely the kinds to be grown. More sheep can be raised per acre on temporary pastures with soils of equal fertility. Pasturing sheep on annual crops makes it possible to rotate pastures more frequently and thus lessen the danger of infection by stomach worms and other internal parasites. Wheat, where it can be successfully grown, provides better winter and early spring pasture for sheep than rye. Oats and field peas together make an excellent spring pasture for sheep. Where the soil is thin soybeans make one of the best temporary pasture crops for sheep. The crop can be pastured until the first frost.

MacMillan Is En Route Home With Specimens

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—The homeward bound expedition to the sub-Arctic led by Commander Donald B. MacMillan, noted explorer, has been successful in its collection of many specimens of life of the frozen arctic world. It is said at the Field museum.

The expedition, financed by Frederick H. Rawson, chairman of the board of the Union Trust company of Chicago, left Wisconsin, Me., last June, and Tuesday's radio-gram indicated it was adhering to schedule. The expedition was due back to the Maine city September 11.

One of the last specimens obtained, according to a recent radio-gram, was a 1500-pound walrus.

The farthest north visited was Blake Island, off Greenland.

Kenneth Rawson, 15-year-old son of the backer of the expedition, and Joseph Field, 15, the son of Stanley Field, president of Field museum, accompanied Commander MacMillan.
