V. V. BEAN DIES OF BLOOD CLOT

Victor Vern Bean, age 36 years, died suddenly yesterday afternoon from the effects of a blood clot in an artery. Mr. Bean underwent a serious appendicitis operation about ten days ago from which he was progressing favorably. He had just been removed from his bed to a wheel chair for the first time when death occurred.

He was born at Itchfield, Utah, May 26, 1890, the son of Victor E. and Mary H. Bean. His mother survives him. He has lived in La Grande for the past 23 years, during the year 1913 he filled a mission for the Latter Day Saints church in the northern states. The same year he was married to Mildred Lindsey.

Besides his widow and three children, Victor, Max and Thora, his mother and the following brothers and sisters survive him: Mrs. June Audner, of Ogden, Utah; Mrs. George A. Chadwick, Walter A. Bean, Ellis E. Bean, W. Grant Bean, Jeff Bean, Lila Bean and Mae Bean, all of La Grande.

Funeral services will be held at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Latter Day Saints church, with the W. H. Bohnenkamp company in charge. Friends may call at 1902 Third street to see the body Tuesday from five o'clock until eight and Wednesday morning from ten o'clock until twelve.

Judge Knowles Offers Jack Strong Position As Guide For Deer Hunting

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 12. (AP).—More than three weeks after his rescue from the slopes of Mount Hood, where he was lost for three days and without food, Jackie Strong, 23-year-old Grosheim, is still receiving letters from all parts of the country commending and congratulating him for his courage and endurance.

The daring youngster has even been offered an engagement as guide for a big game hunt in the mountains. Judge J. W. Knowles, of La Grande, has made such a suggestion on the strength of Jackie being "a good mountaineer and a good sport."

One of the letters which Jackie prizes highly was from Edgar Rice Burroughs, author of "Tarzan of the Apes," which has been Jackie's favorite story and the lessons of which he employed when through his own resources he was in the wilderness of Mount Hood. The letter was accompanied by an autographed copy of Burroughs' latest book.

KNOWLES TELLS OF OFFER

"Yes, I applied for Jackie's services as guide, and sent him a dollar as retaining fee," was Judge Knowles' twinkling-eyed admission on hearing that his offer "made" The Associated Press this morning.

"And if I had the boy along Friday, I should probably have brought back my two deer," he added, a little ruefully.

Jackie Sends Letters

The judge has received a letter from Jackie's father in response to his offer to employ the boy as guide. "He does not write very well yet, although he is a good hand at '599,' dominos and checkers," Mr. Strong explained.

Jack appears eager to come, provided the judge will let him pay his share of the expenses. "Jack is very proud of your letter to him and of the dollar," the letter runs.

"He says he would like to go deer hunting in your party if you will take him, and made me promise to let him up if you would let him go."

"He made one hike about 10 days before he was lost with his brothers from Paradise park to Brightwood down through the wilds fishing, and made the trip from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., and the air line trip is 1 1/2 miles and was going stronger than his brothers."

MISS X TALE UNTRUE, SAYS MRS. SEILAFF

She said she reported to Angeline Temple, "I saw Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Kennedy at that time gave me $50. This was the second $30 she had given me. The first amount was given me the second or first day. At both times I gave receipts for same on 'expense money'."

"In my next affidavit," the statement concluded, "I will continue to tell more regarding some very amazing facts. I will also tell of the promise made by Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Kennedy to pay my expenses and the promise made by Mrs. McPherson to the effect that I would receive

NINE STATES TO VOTE TOMORROW

Prohibition Issue Figures in Primaries in Washington, Louisiana

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13. (AP).—Voters of nine states trudge to the primaries tomorrow to express their desire for state and national offices.

In Massachusetts President Coolidge's personal friend Senator William Butler, chairman of the republican national committee, is opposed for renomination by Washington Cook, member of the governor's council. Cook's campaign is based upon modification of the Volstead act, public ownership of railroads, oil fields and water power and direct election of president.

More than 250,000 persons qualified to participate in the democratic Louisiana primary, which is to determine whether Edwin S. Droussard, the incumbent, or Jared Y. Saunders, a former governor, is to be elected to the senate. Senator Droussard is a wet, while Saunders is dry.

In Colorado primaries, observers save the estimation of a two-year fight for control of the republican party between Senator I. C. Phipps and Senator Rice W. Means, who is running for renomination, and Clarence C. Hamlin, republican national committeeman. Senator Means is the directing head of the state Ku Klux Klan while Hamlin leads the anti-klan faction of the party.

In Washington Senator Wesley Jones, chairman of the senate commerce commission, is opposed for renomination by a field of six candidates, including Frank E. Hammond, an avowed wet.

In New York nine congressional contests were to be settled and members of the state legislature were to be voted on. Senator Porter H. Dale is before the voters of Vermont for their approval.

In Maryland, Senator O. E. Welliver is opposed for the republican nomination by Representative John Phillip Hill of the third district. Representative Hill has devoted much of his campaign to advocating modification of the Volstead act.

In Michigan the voters act upon state officers and issues, in addition to nominating candidates for representatives.

In the South Carolina run-off election Senator Ellison D. Smith is opposed to Colonel Edgar A. Brown, speaker of the state house of representatives, neither having obtained a majority in the previous primary.
