Shimmying Elephant In Her Film Debut At the Star

Lulu, the shimmying elephant, has an important bit in "The Big Show" and is said to be one of the most promising of the younger screen artists.

Lulu is very bashful, but when she was interviewed on the subject of her ambitions, she confessed that she always has an overpowering desire to be in the public eye. Politics or movies—it makes no difference to her, she says. Just so she can be seen and heard about.

Lulu is a graceful little elephant and only weighs around a ton. Her voice, it is said to be almost as efficient a coloratura as the most operatic singer, and she has the great advantage over most mortals in that she has a long convenient trunk.

"The Big Show," Lulu and all, will be the feature attraction at the Star theater today and Thursday, with John Lowell and Evangeline Russell in the leading roles. The story was written by L. Cass Russell, and the picture was taken in the midst of the famous Miller Bros. 191 Ranch Wild West Show as it traveled from city to city.

Realism in "Tin Gods" Creates A Young Flood

Realism is all right in its place but it should know where that place is!

For instance, while "Tin Gods," Thomas Meighan's latest picture, which arrives at the Arcade tomorrow for a three day run, was being shot in Paramount's eastern studio, a call had to be sent to the Astoria fire and street cleaning departments for help.

It happened this way: A mountain torrent built on an exterior set was arranged by Director Allan Dwan so that the water would drain off into a gutter outside the studio.

The river poured but—the sewers refused to function. Soon, Sixth Avenue and the adjacent streets resembled nothing so much as an American Venice. It seemed presently as though the mountains might start floating off the lot with Tommy and Renee Adore as their unwilling passengers. Then—said only then—came the alarm.

After several hours, with the aid of both street cleaning and fire departments, the clogged streets were once more opened to traffic.

Allen Pringle and Renee Adore are featured in "Tin Gods." It was adapted from William Anthony McGuire's stage play.

Love and Speed In Racing Picture At Sherrys

A racing picture as exciting as the old ones in which Wally Reid starred, is at Sherry's tonight. We speak of "The Checkered Flag" featuring charming Elaine Hammerstein and a stellar supporting cast headed by Wallace MacDonald.

This picture, directed by John Noren, is a complete with startling situations and there are enough breath-taking thrills to keep one keyed up every moment.

Humor and many little human touches add considerably to the entertainment value.

Elaine Hammerstein is splendid as the girl who risks her life in a break-neck auto race to save the fortunes of her sweetheart and to prove to him the sincerity of her love.

Wallace MacDonald is all that one looks for in a hero and Lee Shimway is good as the villain who causes all the mischief. Robert Olsen and Peggy O'Neil in character roles are responsible for most of the laughs. Don't miss this one. It's a good story well played.

WHEN WE THINK THE OTHER FELLOW KNOWS

Some people would be far better off if they used their own judgment rather than placing so much confidence in the judgment of the other fellow. The lack of self confidence is a considerable sum. If we were able to think as fast as the other fellow can talk, likely our judgment would save us money.

AN EXTENSION TELEPHONE SAVES STEPS

An extension telephone saves traveling about the home or office, hurrying to answer a call or to make one. Its service is two-fold: It saves your time and the time of those who call you. These are important business and social considerations.
