AT THE THEATERS

Rex Amazes Again In "The Devil Horse"

History is served without shocking the charm of pure entertainment in "The Devil Horse." Rex Amaze's latest elaborate feature production with Rex, king of wild horses, which opened yesterday at the Star Theatre.

The princely Rex will draw to the theatre those who saw "The King of Wild Horses" and "Black Cyclone," and it may as well be mentioned that Rex, who is mentioned in "The Devil Horse" presents also Lady and the Killer, who played with Rex in "Black Cyclone." The human cast, directed by Fred Wood Jackson, includes Gladys McConnell, Yakima Canutt, Robert Kortman, Roy Clements and Master Fred Jackson.

A chapter from the history of the early West is the basis of the story which Rex Amaze wrote as well as produced. Legend, as well as proven fact, enters into it in the individual story of Rex, who is pictured as a "devil horse," of whom the Indians are related to have had a supernatural fear. He is a different type from those usually associated with western pictures, adventure stories and historical stuff, offering real novelty.

The plot offers parallel developments in heroism, love and villainy in the equine and human classes. Rex is the hero, Lady the heroine, and the Killer the heavy of one thread of the story. With Yakima Canutt, Gladys McConnell, and Robert Kortman, following the same respective courses in the human events.

The fascination of watching animals perform as though they carried

Colleen Moore Scores Hit At Arcade

Tapping her other splendid performances in a story full of amusing surprises and human touches, Colleen Moore scored again at the Arcade theatre in her latest First National production, "It Must Be Love," which opened to a crowded house yesterday.

There is a pert, yet wistful, air about this star which fits admirably into such a story as "It Must Be Love." As the misadventured daughter of a delinquent merchant, Colleen carried every member of the audience with her in many moods. A droop of the mouth, and many mouths drooped in the audience. A twirl of the eye and a bird-like gesture with the pantomimic hands, and the audience howled with delight.

The John McCormick production, directed by Alfred E. Green, gave Miss Moore every opportunity to display her versatile talent, ranging from deep sobriety to a state of intoxicating hilarity.

Besides Miss Moore's superb performance, special mention goes to Joan Herriot as the bluff father and Bodil Tosing as the sympathetic mother. Other interesting characterizations were played by Arthur Stone, Dorothy Seastrom, Cleve Moore, Mary O'Brien and Ray Hallor.

A late Public News and Features also shown on this same program which will be present again today and Saturday.

"Lone Wolf Returns" At Sherrys Is Mystery Play

The Columbia Pictures adaptation of "The Lone Wolf Returns," the famous Louis Joseph Vance adventure story, now playing at the Sherry theatre, is a monument to the masterful direction of Ralph Ince and to the ingenuity of scenarist J. Grubb Alexander, as well as to the efforts of a capable cast headed by Bert Lytell and Little Dove.

Bert Lytell, one of the most popular of screen men, gives a truly marvelous performance. He has thrown himself so completely into the spirit of the character he plays that under his mastery Michael Lanyard, international adventurer, suddenly confronted with a desire to go straight, becomes a pulsating bit of life, a tensely emotional, forgettable lover—the sort of character that feminine audiences will come to see over and over.

The character of the story of "The Lone Wolf Returns" admits of variety in the arrangements and design of setting. Lavish furnishings skilfully photographed in tones appropriate to the particular moods of the story, serve as fitting backgrounds for the action, and help to bear out the author's idea of combined picturesqueness and sensationalism beloved to the average theatre goer.

"The Lone Wolf Returns" should prove one of the season's best entertainments. It has the earmarks of efficient production. The crook element, against which much criticism has been directed in connection with productions of the mystery-adventure type, has been reduced to a minimum in this picture, providing entertainment of a character beyond the reach of censure, and containing in addition to its unquestioned box office qualities, a definite moral to
