STANFORD AND O. A. C. IN FRONT

Redshirts Defeat Trojans While Aggies Nose Out Idaho

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2 (AP)—Most gridiron circles buzzed today as the most stunning upset in years, Saturday, continued to provide food for gossip among hungry football fans.

It was the defeat of the powerful University of Southern California eleven by Stanford. A 13-12 victory virtually eliminating Southern California as a conference title contender, was the cause of a lurch of the boys whooping it up down on the Stanford farm. And not the least merry was Coach Vesp Warner, whose band of red shirts turned the trick for the second consecutive year.

Previous to Saturday, most critics assigned Stanford to an utter rout. Nearly all predictions were concerned, not so much an actual defeat itself but by how many touchdowns Southern California would romp off with victory. The first half seemed to bear out the oracles for the favorites led by a 12 to 6 score. But the Cards came back in the third period to score another touchdown, convert the try for point result somewhat upset odds of 2½ to 1 and 2 to 1 in favor of U. S. C.

The Oregon Aggies, only other undefeated conference eleven, maintained a clean slate with a 2 to 0 victory over Idaho but the final result came after the hardest battle the Farmers have been through this season. Thought to be easy victims, the Vandals of Idaho held the Aggies scoreless for three periods and only in the last few minutes of play was Schulerich, fullback, able to drop back and send over a place kick from the 77-yard line.

Ruth's Attempt To Pilfer Sack Held O. K. Play

By HILLY EVANS
American League Enquirer

Did Babe Ruth make the proper play when he tried to steal second base and failed for the final out of the 1926 World series?

There seems to be considerable doubt in the minds of most baseball fans on that point.

It will be recalled that Alexander, in the last half of the ninth, passed Ruth with two down, St. Louis at the time was leading 3-2. Bob Meusel, a good hitter, who had failed to bat up to form in the series, was the next hitter.

What should Ruth do?

Ruth, in trying to steal second by picking what he believed was a good pitch on which to make the attempt, played what is generally regarded in diamond circles as perfectly proper baseball.

The fact that he failed of his objective means nothing as to the correctness of the play.

Proper Baseball

For a runner to score from first on a baseball, it is almost absolutely necessary that such a hit be for extra bases.

In every ball game, extra base hits are the exception.

It really takes two bushnets in succession for a runner to score from first base, if such hits are merely singles. Making two hits in succession is the exception rather than the rule in baseball.

Thus, with Ruth on first, two out in the last of the ninth and St. Louis leading by one run, the hope of the Yankees was to get Ruth to second, from where he would be able to score on a single by Meusel or most any other batter.

The theft of second base was the one avenue open to Ruth, figuring to get the break on a certain pitch, he went down after being fortunate enough to get a big lead.

It was apparent that only a perfect throw would get Ruth caught or O'Farrell made such a toss and prospect.

Here is a Harvard freshman, Dwight P. Davis, Jr., son of the secretary of war, who may put some fight into the Crimson. He is trying for pitcher or first baseman on his class team and is considered a good prospect.
