What Is the Best Way to Kill Cats?

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP).—There are more ways to kill a cat than one, but which is the correct method for a humane society that wants to slay a superstitious feline? That is the question that courts here must decide. Ronald Dean, humane society worker, declares he was seriously injured when a gas bus, in which he was killing a cat blew up, and asks $1250 damages. The death system, he says, is all wrong.

HOBOS KICKING

Insurance Man Tells on Friend

"He suffered considerably from gas in stomach and colic attacks, and at times was very yellow. His doctors diagnosed his ailment as gall bladder trouble and that an operation was necessary. Some one persuaded him to try 'May's'. Since taking it one year ago he tells me he has been able to eat anything. It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the obnoxious mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists. —Adv.

TALKING TIRES WOMEN LESS

BRUSSELS (AP).—Talking fatigues women less than it does men, a British scientist says in a dry objective way, without entering into the controversy as to whether the female is more talkative than the male.

The scientist explains his statement by two facts: first, that the greater the length of the vocal chords, the more energy is required to produce a sound; second, that the vocal chords of women are shorter than those of men.

Office Cat

We heard last week a peddler was telling the merits of an old-fashioned anti-fat remedy. He went too far, however, when he declared it was the original stuff that made the Tower of Pisa lean.

Manager: "I am afraid you are ignoring our efficiency system, Smith."

Smith: "Perhaps so, sir, but somebody has to get the work done."

Florence Feminist: "And should a woman work for her husband?"

Voice from Audience: "Yes—till she gets him!"

LUCKY CHAP

Dame Fortune's golden gifts are capped.

By Aristotelle Gore: The lucky devil never dropped his napkin on the floor; Akron, Ohio, Beacon—Journal.

And did he never go out one day To dine—and to his grief

Such a mischance would never befall him.

Young Aristotelle Gore: He would inquire, quite at his ease,

"Well, what's a napkin for?"

She: "Before we were married you said you couldn't do enough for me."

He: "Well, I guess time has proved that I was right."

Some men seek the services of an efficiency expert when all they need is to quit eating butter cakes and syrup for breakfast.

Customer: When I put the coat on for the first time and buttoned it up, I burst the seam down the back.

Tailor: That shows how well our buttons are sewed on.

AT THE THEATERS

Police Aid Director in Filming Feature

Members of the San Francisco police force turned movie actors a short time ago when Bryant Washburn, Estelle Taylor, Alice Francis and little Frankie Darro "shot scenes for 'Wandering Footsteps,' a banner production made in San Francisco which is showing at Sherrys' theater. An old sailors' lodging house, renamed for the time being the "Harbor Mission," was the scene of a thrilling fist fight in which more than a hundred extras took part.

Movie fans who witnessed the film making saw a long bread line with Alice Francis as one of the hungry ones. They saw Frankie Darro, a youngster, run up and try to drag him out of place; then watched a bum knock the child to the street. The grand melee followed and a police riot call was sent in—filmmatically speaking.

In the "covered wagon" or, the police patrol, as it is probably better known, came a-dashing many officers. They jumped into the fray.

Entered the hero and heroine, in the personages of Washburn and Estelle Taylor. Miss Taylor was a social worker, also filmmatically speaking, while Washburn is the chap carrying the titled role on his shoulders.

Then, while fighters fought, and lovers loved and policemen acted, and cameras clicked and Director Hal Rosson directed, the whole thing suddenly stopped. When the word "cut" came, the extras were paid off, the lights turned down and the stars went home.

Feminine Fads And Fancies Rule "Stella Dallas"

Fads, fancies and foibles of the feminine, following fashion's latest decrees of both the "intime" and drawing room variety, play their active and interesting parts in the photoplay "Stella Dallas," which will soon close its run at the Arcade theatre.

"Stella Dallas," adapted by Frances Marion from Olive Higgins Prouty's novel, has been called a woman's picture attractive to men and women.

Its story deals with the romantic love-life of a girl, Stella, at eighteen, twenty-five and thirty-five. It pictures the uprisings and surges of her heart and reveals in both vivid and imaginative outline the resultant drama occasioned by her yearnings and her conflict with convention.

Her romance, her marriage, her flirtations, her beautiful child, her advent into society, and her final realization of all she could give for happiness, are the romantic highlights of this photodrama of American life, directed by that master of sympathetic interpretation, Henry King, and sponsored by Samuel Goldwyn, as his first picture for United Artists Corporation.

All of fashion's aids to make beauty more beautiful enter into the scheme of the drama. Gorgeous gowns worn by Alice Joyce, who plays Helen Morrison, and the wedding costume of Lola Moran, who plays Laurel, are said to be ravishing to the eye.

Evening gowns, street wear, hats, all of latest mode and trim form a veritable parade for feminine delight.

Belle Bennett, who plays the title role of Stella, employs paint, powder, mascara, jewels, permanent wavers, wrinkle removers and an array of feminine adjuncts that everyone readily associates with the kind of a girl Stella is.
