Pioneers

More than three hundred years since the first Thanksgiving, three centuries since the first thankful celebration for the start that has grown — generation after generation — into the United States of today.

They could not vision what foundation they were laying. They could not dream that the experiences and material things for which they were justly thankful would be looked upon 300 years later as the gravest hardships.

To realize what we have that is deserving of appreciation on Thanksgiving day, we have only to look about us. Plentiful crops, continuous employment, busy industries, active places of business, happy homes, fine schools and churches, increased leisure and the pleasure it makes desirable and possible.

A good community in which to live, good friends with whom to associate, good customers to whom we can render service—we take this opportunity to tender Thanksgiving greetings to the people of the La Grande vicinity.
