CHRISTMAS

From the Dearborn Independent
Let us now go even until Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass.

It is shepherd speech in homely vein of common sense. For this thing did not occur in a book, nor in a church, but in the night fields under the night sky. Nor were these shepherd-like characters, their own Bible had closed centuries before; doubtless they rested in their graves ere the new Bible was begun. No, there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping their watch over their flocks by night.

They had heard the Messenger's tidings and the slaying of the heavenly soldiers; they had seen the sudden glory; then silence fell and night. And they said to one another, "Let us go and see."

If they are in the Bible now, it is that we may put them in the fields again—shepherds watching their flocks by night.

Nothing is said of their character for religion, good or bad. They were ordinary men on ordinary duty to whom great news had come, and they said, "Let us go and see."

At a little distance they could see, in darker shadow than the night, the walls and towers of the little town. First the spot where the Angel stood, over the space so lately lit with more than earthly light, on through the gates and up through the dark, dark streets they pushed their quest. They found no temple, no synagogue, no creeds, no altars—on, on they sped, and found a Babe in a manger. Multitudes, multitudes begin the journey every year, but not all get past the department store, the tree, the feast and Santa Claus. Not all push on across the fields to Bethlehem, to the Manger and the Christ. On, on past Yule to Christmas, past Christmas to Bethlehem, past Bethlehem to the place outside the inn where the young Child lay; on past the Child to His meaning for mankind in God.

At Christmas all the world is Christian. Men have met Christ with John of Jordan; they have met Him confronting with holy anger profiteers of the Temple; they have met Him in great acts of compassion upon the poor and sick and friendless, and He beheld the multitude as sheep without a shepherd; they have met Him on His Cross; they have met Him in the chill dawn of Easter as He revived, forth and wrapped himself in a gardener's smock, but multitudes who never met Him thus have met Him as the Babe of Christmas. The Manger has conquered its hundreds of millions in every generation.

And because the world is more Christian, the season of Christmas extends itself increasingly through the year. With each succeeding generation Christmas lasts longer and longer, and searches out those places for its light and warmth. Christ healed men, and his people have ever since increasingly girdled the earth. He taught, and education spread from pole to pole. He walked about as a freeman, and every kind of despotism has dwindled under the power of the Freedom which He bequeathed to men. He is the one force that has divided history.

The story of the world is in two chapters, Before Bethlehem, and After Bethlehem.

"Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass? . . . And they came and found the babe lying in a manger."

Things the Youngsters can make for Gifts

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

A child doesn't have to be a budding artist to enjoy making things. And the training he gets in working out his simple ideas in crafts, will always be valuable to him. There is nothing so pitiful as a grown-up who doesn't know how to use his hands.

When Christmas comes, the youngster will want to try his hand at making gifts. In this he should be encouraged, and advice and materials given him. A goodly supply of patience and alertness will be needed by mother or auntie, who is guiding the young fingers, but enjoying these qualities, she will find the labor worth it.

Supervision by grown-ups
A youngster intent on his work, does not observe the paint can near the edge of the table, and the possibility of its being knocked off—nor yet does it occur to him that the water color brush must not be dipped in the glue. Many minor accidents can be headed off by alert supervision of the grown-up in charge of activities.

Paint Unfinished Wood Boxes
Unfinished wood boxes offer a number of possibilities. The box can be painted with a bright dye—the transfer pictures, scattered about top and sides, and the whole shingled. Painted with bright enamel, such a box would be very attractive, with fruit in an interesting group, on its cover, or flowers prettily arranged.

A can or two of enamel paints, and a yard of black pelted oil cloth will supply materials for several useful gifts. One can make another a table runner or a shelf covering, and other things besides.

Gift for Cook Book
The black oil cloth will make a pretty cover for a cook book, with a floral decoration. A case for stationery can be constructed that will be desirable and very desirable to one who is traveling. A box of stationery will be needed, preferably of standard size, so that when the case is emptied, it can be easily filled again.

Basket of Goodies
If a child is interested in one who is shut-in, a number of pleasant gifts can be contrived. A basket of home-made goodies would seem especially nice, with each article wrapped separately. The child could make candy and cookies, and tie up one of mother's small glasses of jelly in a bright colored paper. Nuts would go in a separate package and one or two small amusing toys.

Normal Weather Is Forecast For Week
SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 18. (AP)—The weather outlook for the week of December 19, in the far western states, was announced here today by the U. S. weather bureau as follows:

Lane County Beef Growers Organize
EUGENE, Ore., Dec. 18. (AP)—Organization of the Lane County Beef Growers' association was perfected here yesterday, and the new group protested against any measure that would require a tuberculosis test for beef cattle. About 25 were signed up by the new organization.

A Christmas Thought for a Little Boy

Perhaps, perhaps the radiant star which led the Wise Men from afar knew nothing of their holy quest—perhaps it only did its best.

And when its beam so clear and mild showed where there slept a little child.

How could it know how many men would sorrow if it failed just then—

Or dream that it would ever be so saved by little boys like me?

And maybe, if I truly try, as I grow up and time goes by, I'll learn like that bright star to do the thing I know is brave and true.

And if my task is hard and long, I know the Star will make me strong.

And if my will grows weak and frail, the Star will teach me not to fail.

O Christmas star, lead even me—like the Wise Men, I too shall see! —Willie Houston in Dearborn Independent.

Ex-Congressman Is Given Parole

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. (AP)—John W. Langley, former congressman from Kentucky, was paroled today after serving one year of a three year sentence imposed upon him for violation of the prohibition law.

Group for Gifts
In a shop where foreign goods are received many small boxes accumulated. These suggested several gifts. If a box with a lid was found, it was sandpapered to take off all rough edges and corners.

New Location
Starting Monday, Dec. 20, we will be located in Ledbetter's Garage in the new Roesch Bldg., on Adams Avenue.

When painted, and decorated, such a box could be used to hold packs of cards, cigarettes, or could be used in a dresser.

Several boxes were available that had no lids. These were sawed off, so that each made a small tray. When sandpapered, painted and decorated with a neat design, a tray of this kind would be an acceptable gift to anyone.
